"Back The Attack" went into action yesterday.

The Army's mightiest show, which officially started at noon, from the opening drew increasing crowds of men, women and children to the Washington Monument Grounds under ideal weather conditions.

Sixty-five thousand persons, including Mrs. Winston Churchill, the British Prime Minister's daughter, Mary, and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau visited the thousands of Army exhibits and watched the smooth-flowing action show—and saw guard mount of the White House Military Police guard detachment.

Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, who following the opening accompanied Secretary Morgenthau's tour with Mrs. Churchill and Mary, later said: "It was a complete success." Lieut. Col. Frank T. McCabe, in charge of the show, looked considerably relieved.

"Command Performance"

Unable to attend the afternoon and regular night performances due to previous commitments, a special "Command Performance" was run through for Mrs. Churchill beginning at 10:15 p. m.

She was escorted to a box in the grandstand by Secretary Morgenthau, General Surles and Mrs. Bernard Shanley. Several thousand, who witnessed the regular night show stayed again to watch highly trained soldiers go through the fourth action exhibition for the opening day. Night attendance exceeded the afternoon mark by several thousand.

Secretary Morgenthau will speak for the Treasury Department's

D. C. Highway, Recreation Budgets Hiked

Estimates Stress Higher Expenses Arising From War

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

Increased operating expenses resulting from wartime conditions were stressed yesterday in the budgets of the Recreational and Highway Departments submitted to the District Commissioners for the fiscal year 1945.

The District Recreation Board submitted a budget representing an increase of $136,727 over the current year. Major items in the increase are allocations for overtime pay and other salary compensations, additional employes and construction of new facilities.

The total requested is $633,595 as compared with $496,868 appropriated for 1944. Personal services require $483,635 of the total while other obligations total $31,850. A sum of $118,110 is included to be turned over to the National Capital Parks for maintenance of District recreational facilities situated in the parks.

Eight Recreational Directors

One new information director is asked at a starting salary of $2300. It is contended that the volume of requests for information on recreational facilities and the need for a person to handle publicity for newspapers and radio justifies the creation of the position.

Eight senior recreational directors are required at a base salary of $1800. They are to be stationed at the Chevy Chase, Edgewood, Turkey Thicket, Rosedale, Kenilworth, Bundy, Francis and Langston units.

In addition 13 recreational directors, annual salary $1620, are asked for assignments at various schools and playgrounds.

In the temporary employment category $2700 is required for additional swimming pool employes.

Minister Quits In Hull Rebuff To Argentine

Storni's Bid for Lend-Lease Help Sharply Denied

By Charles Gopnill
Associated Press Staff Writer

Buenos Aires, Sept. 9.—Segundo R. Storni, retired vice admiral who was a pro-Democratic member of Pedro Ramirez' government, resigned as foreign minister tonight following disclosure of a sensational exchange of letters with Secretary Hull.

The resignation was accepted.

Withdrawal of the bluff old officer came as the Argentine press, profiting by government authorization to comment on the diplomatic incident, generally criticized the foreign minister for having placed Argentina in a position to receive a public admonition from the United States Government.

Lease-Lend Aid Denied

It came with rejection of a bid for U. S. Lease-Lend aid for Argentina, the only American nation which still maintains relations with the Axis.

[Neither Secretary Hull nor the State Department had any comment last night on Storni's resignation, but the admiral's retirement caused no surprise here, in view of the brusqueness of Secretary Hull's charge that the present Argentine governing regime had failed to carry out the Argentine people's desire for closer collaboration with other American nations' war effort.

[It was pointed out by the Associated Press that some officials here emphasize that Storni was regarded as the most pro-Allied member of the Argentine cabinet and that he apparently had been made the scapegoat. Some diplomats questioned whether the Ramirez government itself could weather the shock of such a diplomatic humiliation.—Editor's note.]

Nazis Order Stand at Po 'To Last Man'

Hitler Reported In Hasty Parley To Stem Allies' Italian Drive

By Edward D. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 9.—Adolf Hitler, trapped in the center of his own wavering European fortress, was reported to have called a hurried war conference today at which it was decided to reinforce the Po River line in Italy and fight there to the last man.

Apparently determined to make Italy a bloody battlefield despite her capitulation, Germany moved swiftly to seize important communication centers and strategic points to offset gains already made by Allied landing forces and appeals to Italian forces to turn against their former Allies.

Berlin announced that Italian troops had occupied the vital Brenner Pass and, with announcement that some key communications were held by Italians "loyal to the Axis," intimated that the pass itself might be in friendly hands. Civilian railway traffic between the two countries was halted by the Germans.

Move Into Yugoslavia

Germany also swung quickly into action across the Adriatic, occupying the Dalmatian area of Yugoslavia's southwestern coast in an attempt to block any Allied invasion of the Balkans through that gateway. The seizure, the broadcast said, was carried out with the aid of Croat puppets.

Other German broadcasts acknowledged that Italian troops already had turned against the Germans in some parts of Italy, but claimed that the Italian internal situation was generally under German control.

Reports from the Balkans said that Italian divisions which have been used as occupation troops

Out for Big Game, Gen. Eisenhower Tells Reporter

By Clark Lee
International News Service Staff Writer

With General Eisenhower at an Advanced Allied Command Post, Sept. 9.—"We are playing in the big leagues. You can't hit a home run by bunting. You have to step up there and take your cut at the ball."

In those words, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower explained why the Allies decided on an all-out invasion of Italy rather than attacking other "stepping stones" such as Sardinia, Corsica or Crete.

General Eisnehower told me on the eve of the invasion:

"The time has come to discontinue nibbling at islands and hit the Germans where it hurts. I do not believe in fighting battles to chase some one out of somewhere. Our object is to trap and smash them."

The Germans avoided being trapped in Sicily and got a good share of their forces out. But if General Eisenhower is successful in this present invasion, the Germans will not get out of Italy without heavy losses.

In addition to striking severe blows at the German army, our objectives in Italy include seizure of airfields within bombing range of Germany. This would force a diversion of German fighter and antiaircraft strength now concentrated around the targets and along the routes followed by bombers flying from England.

Knowing this, the Germans undoubtedly will fight hard to hold northern Italy and may even have to withdraw some troops and planes from Russia.

Duce Reported Turned Over To Allies, Taken to Africa

London, Sept. 9 (INS).—Benito Mussolini has been turned over to the Allies as a prisoner and taken to North Africa, Swedish dispatches reported tonight. The Italian correspondent of the Stockholm Svenska Dagbladet quoted the Milan newspaper Corriere dela Sera as stating that the fallen Duce had been "delivered" to the Allies by Italy.

Germans Warned Not to Aid Parachutists

London (Friday), Sept. 10.—Russian armies have stormed into Bakhmach, key railroad junction on the road to Kiev, squeezed a menacing vise on Bryansk and dashed to within 60 miles of the Dnieper River in a swift advance from the liberated Donets Basin in the south, Moscow reported today.

More than 300 towns and villages were captured and more than 4100 Germans were killed in the day's victories that saw the Soviet armies push into the town of Nedrigailov, 20 miles east of Romni, and captured Lyudinovo, 45 miles north of Bryansk.

Invasion Rehearsal Stirs British Near Straits of Dover

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 9.—In crashing synchronization with the new Allied landings in Italy, record fleets of American and British aircraft battered Nazi ports and airfields in northern France today and in day-long operations also formed an umbrella for naval and landing craft that filled the Straits of Dover in an unprecedented dress rehearsal of a cross-channel invasion.

Under cover of the mightiest daylight air fleet ever lofted from the British Isles, combined operations launched naval vessels, landing barges and all other manner of invasion craft in the biggest and boldest exercises of the kind ever held.

16 Planes Lost by Allies

A night communique, issued jointly by the Air Ministry and U. S. Army headquarters summarizing the day's operations against the continent, said American planes flew a record number of more than 1000 sorties to hit multiple targets, including the Paris area where, it was announced Flying Fortresses downed 15 enemy fighters.

[The International News Service said that at least 500 individual sorties were made by British and American warplanes today, raising to 4000 sorties the number flown in 30 hours since midday Wednesday.]

Subsequently an Air Ministry communique announced RAF medium and light bombers had attacked five airfields in France and

'Operations Proceeding'

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 9.—Strong American and British forces under US Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark hammered out a bridgehead near Naples today in a dawn landing that overpowered a number of stoutly resisting German troops embittered by Italy's unconditional surrender.

Allied reinforcements were reported tonight still streaming ashore.

"Operations are proceeding satisfactorily," said an Allied communique of this daring stroke one-third of the way up the Italian Peninsula.

The troops led by Clark, hero of the submarine mission to North Africa that paved the way for the successful Allied invasion there last November, "are in contact with German forces and prisoners have been taken," the bulletin added. "The disembarkation of troops with their guns and vehicles is proceeding according to plan."

(The London Daily Mail said early Friday that Italy's most powerful warships—three 35,000-ton battleships, the Littorio, Vittorio Veneto and Impero—had escaped with a fleet of cruisers and destroyers from La Spezia and were now steaming for Allied ports.

(Other London morning newspapers carried the same report, quoting the Rome radio. The Mail's account of the escape said there were indications that British warships were providing protection as the Italian ships steamed swiftly down the west Italian coast.)

Before the troops struck the shore near Naples three waves of Flying Fortresses had destroyed the German military nerve center at Frascati, 12 miles outside Rome, in a neat culmination of events that has staggered the Axis both politically and militarily.

Bombers Level Nearly Every Building

The paralyzing blow at Frascati occurred six hours before yesterday's announcement of the Italian surrender. Nearly every building in the resort city, famous for its wine, had been occupied by German military authorities. These were leveled by the big avenging American eagles, official reports said.

American Liberators from the Middle East also dumped 150 tons of explosives on the Foggia expanse of airdromes less than 100 miles east of Naples to facilitate the big amphibious operation.

The landing occurred a few moments after 4 a. m. (10 p. m. Wednesday, EWT) under cover of a powerful barrage laid down by the American and British Navies. This terrific rain of explosives smashed wooded hills overhanging the invasion coast, and left great columns of smoke as the Allied shock troops plunged ashore.

An idea of the size of the Allied force was gained from a Canadian reconnaissance pilot, John Anthony Vasicek of Chatham, Ontario, who said the convoy expedition to Naples covered a sea surface of 1000 square miles "swarming with an invasion fleet."

(Berlin radio said the landing occurred in the Salnerno Gulf at Amalfi, 200 miles below Naples. It broadcast a report from the International Information Bureau that German planes attacking landing barges and warships had sunk one Allied cruiser. There was no Allied confirmation of this Nazi propaganda agency report.

Additional Landings Reported on Sardinia

(Italians in Madrid reported additional Allied landings had been made on the Island of Sardinia, and said that Italian troops in Corsica, between Sardinia and the French mainland, were expecting Allied planes to make at least "token landings" at Corsican airfields which are in Italian possession.

(There was no Allied confirmation of reports that Allied troops also had landed at Civitavecchia above Rome, at Leghorn on the Gulf of Geonoa, and at the big Italian naval base of La Spezia.)

German reaction was resolute, but it was said here that the opposition was no greater than had been anticipated. Some of the first Allied units ashore collided with German defenders, but in an all-day fight established a foothold in the area of the big Italian port.

The crucial period is likely to come when the first strong enemy counterattack is hurled at the Allies, as was the case in Sicily. The Germans are believed to have strong armored and artillery forces in the area in anticipation of Allied "leap-frogging" tactics along the Italian coast.

In southern Italy, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army, which includes Canadian contingents, executed another successful coastal leap early Wednesday at Vibo Valentia on the Gulf of Eufemia, 30 miles north of Palmi. General Montgomery put his troops on boats and sent them up the coast after finding that demolitions were checking his direct land thrusts.

The Eighth Army already holds a 76-mile section of the Italian toe after gaining possession of the trans-peninsular road between Gioia and Locri, and is being steadily reinforced with troops dispatched from Sicily. More German prisoners have been seized in the fighting on that front, the communique said.

A smashing thrust toward Naples only 10 hours after announcement of Italy's surrender threatened seizure of the huge port which adjoins an immense north-south rail network in Italy. A German collapse in the area would trap sizable enemy forces trying to stem General Montgomery in the south.

Seizure of bomb-shattered Naples also would give the Allies a greater bridgehead for the landing of reinforcements in the drive toward central Italy, where the Germans apparently have taken over control of large segments of the country.

There still was no definite indication whether the Italian army is engaged in the conflict—except for possible clashes with the Germans—although Berlin broadcasts heard here asserted that a new Fascist government had been set up in Italy.

Badoglio Apparently Still in Saddle

Marshal Badoglio's regime apparently still was in the saddle at Rome, however. The Rome radio was heard broadcasting again this morning the text of Badoglio's announcement of unconditional surrender to the Allies, and his order to Italian troops to resist should they be attacked from any other quarter—meaning Germany.

(The Italian Stefani News Agency in a broadcast recorded by United States Government monitors said the Germans had blown up the exits from the port and industrial regions of Naples and Genoa. The agency also quoted "rumors" that three German armored divisions were moving toward Genoa, and that the British navy was off that port.

(Berlin broadcasts quoted a German military spokesman as saying that the new Fascist government had countermanded Marshal Badoglio's

Counterfeit Coupons

OPA Takes Steps to Check Illegal Gasoline Sales Here

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Moving to check the illegal sales of gasoline in Washington, the local OPA yesterday revealed a three-point program designed to curtail the use of coupons.

Since the recent issuance of new coupons the OPA has obtained a machine which will make tests of the paper on which suspected coupons are printed and, it is hoped, eventually lead to the detection of counterfeiters.

Another step is being taken by the Office of Defense Transportation, now making a check of the exact mileage driven by holders of T coupons, to ascertain their needs. It is hoped this will act as a check on admitted illegal sales of coupons to filling stations which need them to account for gasoline some have sold without coupons.

The third move has been to have the local OPA take over the task of the actual issuance of coupons on basis of certification from local boards.

John L. Laskey, OPA enforcement attorney, said they had not found any counterfeit coupon sales here by racketeers, such as were discovered in New York, but he admitted that there is obviously a tremendous increase in vehicular traffic.

A poll of gasoline experts resulted in the verdict that the major factors behind the increase in traffic has been "overissuance" of coupons by local boards.

Due to the comparative ease with which the wholesalers can be checked, officials asserted they

Total Ruin Threatened Italy, Badoglio Telegraphs Hitler

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 9.—A Rome broadcast disclosed today that Premier Pietro Badoglio sent a telegram to Adolf Hitler in Berlin yesterday telling him that Italy was forced to ask the Allies for an armistice "to avoid total ruin."

"One cannot ask the people to continue to fight when all legitimate hope—I do not say of victory, but even of resistance—has vanished," Badoglio's message said.

Similar telegrams were sent to Italian diplomatic missions in Tokyo, Budapest, Bucharest, Sofia, Zagreb and Bratislava, the broadcast said, so that they "might inform the governments to which they are accredited" of Italy's reasons for seeking an armistice.

The text of the telegram, as recorded by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service, follows:

"When I took over the government at the moment of crisis brought about by collapse of the Fascist regime, my first decision and my first appeal which I addressed to the Italian people, were for continuation of the war to defend Italian territory against the imminent danger of foreign invasion.

"I did not hide from myself the very grave situation in which Italy found herself, her poor chances of resistance and the immense sacrifices she would yet be called upon to make.

"But the sense of duty which every responsible statesman owes to his people prevailed over these considerations. That is to say, it was necessary to avoid Italian territory falling prey to foreigners.

"And Italy continued to fight, continued to suffer destructive orders to the Italian navy to flee to North Africa.)

General Clark's new invasion strike apparently functioned smoothly despite opposition. Reports said that apparently, vehicles, ammunition, food, medicine and other supplies were unloaded soon after the first soldiers surged ashore.

Clark formerly commanded the American Fifth Army when it trained in French Morocco. He and several other American officers made a secret submarine trip to French North Africa to gain valuable information from pro-Allied French officers just before the invasion of that territory last fall.

Identification of Forces Not Permitted

Detailed identification of his assault forces in the Naples area was not permitted for fear that it would aid the enemy. (Secretary of War Stimson said in Washington that some Fifth Army units were involved in the operation.)

British Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, who commanded Allied ground forces through the Tunisian and Sicilian campaigns, is directing the operations of all troops in Italy. He in turn is responsible to the Allied commander in chief, U. S. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who made the dramatic announcement Wednesday of Italy's surrender.

The Americans and British under Clark face one of the grimmest fights of the whole war since it is generally accepted here that large German forces in Italy have been ordered to fight to the death to delay as long as possible the Allied strides northward toward the heart of Hitler's fortress.

Naples is 100 miles from the Adriatic coast on the other side of the peninsula. It is 120 air line miles from Rome, and 370 from the Po River where the main German fortifications lie. Mountains south of the Po afford an ideal natural defense for the Germans; the Lombardy Plain north of the river would afford the Allies excellent aerial bases for attacks on the German homeland.

were being disarmed and replaced by German divisions.

Switzerland rushed reinforcements to her own frontiers today to await any eventuality, and dispatches to Madrid said the Swiss had mobilized about four-fifths of their frontier forces.

Strong Italian Formations

A dispatch to the Bern newspaper Der Bund said strong Italian formations were drawn up within a few miles of German troops in northern Italy and near Venice.

Allied forces which landed on the Tyrrhenian coastline (presumably in the Naples area) were reported in Bern to be moving northward with an advance guard of Italian troops.

Milan, Turin and other northern Italian industrial cities were said to be completely under Italian control, with German troops leaving those places.

Clashes between German and Italian troops were reported to have taken place at Genoa, Tortona, Certosa and Pavia.

The island of Corsica, in the northern Tyrrhenian Sea and possible springboard to an Allied invasion of northern Italy or southern France, was reported from Madrid to be in Italian hands although there had been rumors all morning that the Germans planned an aerial assault on the island.

Allied Fleet Off Corsica

Other reports said that an Allied fleet lay off Corsica today, ready for any action, and that Allied planes were already landing on Corsican bases.

The reports reaching Madrid did not disclose the fate of the few Germans known to have been on Corsica, or those on Sardinia at the time of the Italian surrender. German planes have been using airports on Sardinia for attacks on Allied forces in the Mediterranean.

Underlying the wave of contradictory reports were clear indications that Hitler was hastily redistributing his depleted forces across the length and breadth of the continent.

The mounting threats to his security included the rapidly progressing advance of the American and British invasion forces; the smashing Red army gains in the east; resurgent guerilla armies throughout the conquered lands; and, in last night's rehearsal invasion by the British in the Channel, the threat of still another Allied thrust from the west.

Massive Power Ready

It is problematical how much of a fight the Germans could really put up along the Po River in face of the massive power streaming into taly in spite of the Nazi's reported determination to fight there to the last man.

Germany's strength in Italy has been estimated at about 300,000 men—roughly 18 divisions—but a military commentator in London said only half that number had been concentrated behind the Po.

Indications that these forces were being feverishly reinforced were seen in Madrid dispatches telling of a great column of military traffic flowing into Italy from Germany and southeastern France.

The recall of large contingents of Nazi occupation troops from Norway also was reported. The Germans will rely, these reports said, chiefly upon coastal batteries to head off any allied invasion thrust across the North Sea.

Nazis' Italian Headquarters Bombed to Bits

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 9.—Waves of Flying Fortresses of the Northwest African Air Force's strategic command dropped hundreds of tons of bombs yesterday on Frascati, 12 miles east of Rome, completely demolishing the German military headquarters in Italy there.

The returning pilots were greeted on their return to their bases by the news of the Italian surrender.

Coming over in three waves starting exactly at noon yesterday, the Fortresses left the town demolished and burning with a cloud of smoke billowing thousands of feet into the sky.

Yesterday was a day of widespread aerial activity, but the raid on Frascati shadowed all else.

Kesselring Escapes Injury

(The Italian news agency Stefani said today that Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring, commander of German air forces in Italy, escaped "only by a miracle" when a bomb hit his house during the Allied raid yesterday on Nazi headquarters in Frascati near Rome. The broadcast was heard by Reuters in London.)

The first wave of Fortresses took the enemy so completely by surprise that little or no fighter opposition was encountered.

Succeeding waves had it hot and heavy, but they gave a good account of themselves, shooting down 28 out of 50 interceptors that rose to meet them.

Going over in 7-minute waves, the Fortresses poured their high explosives on the town, where, an official statement said, "Practically every building in the town was being used by the Germans."

The toll taken of enemy planes for the 24-hour period totaled 33, including a few of the fast-dwindling number of Italian fighters which were operating under the command of the Germans prior to Italy's surrender.

Four ME-109s out of 25 were shot down when the enemy tried to stave off an attack by American B-25 Mitchells which concentrated on bridges in the Trebisacce region of the east coast of the Italian toe.

Highway Bombed

Another Mitchell formation bombed an important highway at Lauria near Sapri, encountering no interference, while American Marauders raided railroad and highway bridges at Sapri, meeting only weak antiaircraft fire.

British Eighth Army forces, meanwhile, moved ashore yesterday in the Gulf of Eufemia in a flanking landing under a heavy Spitfire screen set up by the tactical branch of Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz's air force. The patrolling planes, however, were not given an opportunity for combat.

Patrolling railroads and highways ahead of Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's advancing forces, United States, British, Australian and South African fighter-bombers damaged at least 24 trucks and two gun trailers.

The day's reported activities also included a sharp bombing of the dispersal area at the Pabillonis landing field on Sardinia by American P-40 Warhawks.

In other operations, RAF Bostons raided the railroad yards at Metaponto and Benevento on the Gulf of Taranto; American Mitchells attacked the Pontenza railroad yards east of Salerno and RAF and Canadian Wellingtons made night attacks on rail targets at Battipaglia Eboli just east of Battipaglia, and Formia, northwest of Naples.

In addition to attacking the enemy's communications system, Allied planes swooped low over troop concentrations, strafing and bombing military installations.

Palmi Days

Italian Townsfolk Lionize Briton

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press War Correspondent

Palmi, Italy, Sept. 8 (Delayed).—In Palmi, the microcosm of all Italy, joyous citizens heard the news of the armistice tonight and took a lone British tommy to their hearts.

Lance Corpl. John Rennison of Liverpool was literally swamped by Italians hailing him as a representative of the Allied powers with which they were at last at peace.

The armistice report first heard here was from a London BBC broadcast. It spread like wildfire through the little town which after month-long air raids and a final naval shelling was occupied by the Eighth Army last Monday.

People streamed down the hillside streets to the Church of Santa Maria overlooking the beach and bronze bells rang exuberantly in the tower.

Townsfolk surrounded Rennison—the only Briton in sight—and escorted him into the church. Of Catholic faith, he was embraced by Carmelite Father Leopardi.

Special prayers were said as the sunset glow from the sea came through the broken windows and illuminated the altar and the image of the Holy Virgin.

An Italian woman who said her son was killed in the war wept and clasped the young British soldier's hand.

"I didn't know what to say," Rennison remarked later. "I was just as glad as the Italians that we don't have to fight them any more."

bombardment, continued to face sacrifices and sorrow, in the hope of preventig the enemy, who already was master of Sicily—a great loss, most deeply felt by the Italian people—from crossing to the mainland.

"Notwithstanding all our efforts, our defense has crumbled. The enemy advance could not be halted. The invasion is proceeding. Italy has no power of resistance left.

"Her large cities, beginning with Milan and Palermo, have either been destroyed or occupied by the enemy. Her industries have been paralyzed, her communications—of such importance because of the topography of the country—have been thrown into confusion.

"Her resources are completely exhausted, one reason being the serious and increasing restrictions on imports from Germany.

All Italy Open to Attack

"No part of Italy is safe from enemy attack, having no adequate defense, as has been proved by the fact that the enemy was able to land as he pleased, where he pleased and when he pleased, in considerable force, which grew each day in numbers and in might, crushing all resistance and laying waste the country.

"Under these conditions the Italian government could no longer assume responsibility for continuing the war, which already has cost Italy—apart from loss of her colonial empire — destruction of her towns, annihilation of her industries, of her merchant navy, of her railway network and, lastly, invasion of her own soil.

"One cannot ask the people to continue to fight when all legitimate hope—I do not say of victory, but even of resistance—has vanished.

"To avoid total ruin, taly therefore was forced to address a request for an armistice to the enemy."

Duce Dragged Away by Force, Berlin Says

By the Associated Press

The Berlin radio broadcast yesterday its version of Benito Mussolini's downfall—that Mussolini was "dragged by brute force" from the royal palace, strapped to a stretcher and spirited away in an ambulance.

His removal on July 25, the broadcast said, was the result of a secretly planned coup d'etat between King Vittorio Emanuele and the present premier, Pietro Badoglio.

The radio gave this version of Mussolini's "abduction":

Il Duce had requested an interview with the King to request full powers to halt sabotage, the "cowardly desertion" of generals and other officers of the air force in Sicily, the "unsocial attitude" of superior Italian officers and corruption in the army.

He was taken completely by surprise when, at the close of the interview, the King said:

"I must inform you that your successor has already been designated and in fact entered office. This man is Marshal Badoglio. Put yourself at his disposal."

Mussolini answered that he felt strong enough, in order to save the Italian people, to oppose the crown and, if necessary, even the army.

As he left, he noted that his car and special guard had been removed from the Palace entrance and ordered servants to bring it.

Instead, a colonel approached him and said:

"Your Excellency, I have received an order to arrest you. Please enter this car."

Nazi Ships Attack Spitsbergen, Germans Say

London, Sept. 9 (AP).—The German International Information Bureau, a propaganda agency, said in a broadcast today that German naval units have made a strong attack on the Aretic island of Spitsbergen, a group of islands about 400 miles north of Norway.

Allied troops raided the islands exactly two years ago today and removed 1000 Norwegian miners, destroyed coal and oil reservoirs and rescued Russian and French prisoners of the Germans.

Whether they left an occupational force was never brought out officially, but there were unconfirmed reports in London in April, 1942, that a German force had landed there.

The Spitsbergen raid gave rise to the theory that the Germans were seeking some means of distracting attention from the fall of Italy.

Hide Those Quaking Knees, Goebbels Urges Nazi Public

By the Associated Press

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, in his first statement since Italy's capitulation, told the Germans yesterday that "he who gets weak in the knees should at least hide his weakness to prevent his state of mind from affecting other people."

"There is only one sin we can commit at present, namely, that of cowardice," the Nazi propaganda minister asserted in the latest edition of Das Reich.

The article, quoted by the Berlin radio, declared that the "German people is rejecting all enemy propaganda to which it lent its ear in the second half of the first World War with the result that Germany found herself enslaved for a long and disgraceful period."

"In time of war," Goebbels went on, "everybody should look at crises and burdens from the angle in which they will represent themselves a year or even 10 years later. Crises and burdens will then be more easily borne."

"One day the hour will come when the last battle is fought," he concluded. "Lucky will be those people who are then on the side of the victors. We have never doubted for a single moment that we shall be on the winning side."

Argentine Rebuff Puts Minister Out

ernment of President Ramirez for Lend-Lease aid on the ground that Argentina has failed to do its share in protecting the Western Hemisphere from aggression.

Hull based his action on the failure of the Argentine government to fulfill its commitments to break relations with the Axis and end financial and commercial dealings with Axis countries.

Among the last of Storni's acts as foreign minister was a conference with Japanese Ambassador Sador Shutomii. The German charge d'affaires, Erich Meynen, simultaneously saw Undersecretary Roberto Gache.

Visits of Jap, German

The visits of Shutomii and Meynen at the Foreign Ministry had been expected since the disclosure of Storni's statement to Hull that defeat of the Axis was approaching inexorably and that the totalitarian nations had nothing to hope for from Argentina.

Storni told newspapermen the Japanese envoy came principally to discuss arrangements for the passage of the Japanese Embassy staff of Santiago, Chile, which will embark on the exchange ship Gripsholm at Montevideo.

Tomii took advantage of the occasion to inquire whether publication of the Storni-Hull notes foretold a change in Argentine foreign policy.

Storni said he replied "not for the present."

German Radio 'Orders' Back Puppet Regime in Italy

By John H. Colburn
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Sept. 9.—The Germans strove mightily by political as well as military action today to repair the damage caused by the bombshell thrown into their Mediterranean arrangements by Italy's divorce from the war.

They set up a puppet Italian regime to lure Italians from Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio and the attractive promises of peace, with appeals to save the "honor of Italy," but they admitted by implication that political and military events had taken a highly confusing turn, so much so that instances of "local resistance" by Italian troops to German forces had occurred.

Italians here regarded the new government as little more than a "comic opera" regime, which would gain few followers.

Stream of Proclamations

Berlin emitted a stream of radio proclamations and "orders" from the new government set up to carry on where Mussolini left off.

One instructed Italian naval commanders and ship captains to disregard Badoglio's orders to flee to North Africa or other Allied ports, and threatened that such ships as obeyed Badoglio's instructions would be bombed.

Antoher declared that steps had been taken to form Italian volunteer units to join the German army and serve as the "nucleus of a reorganized Italian army."

Italians said that the new puppet government probabyl would be headed by Roberto Farinacci, former Fascist Party secretary, and that its seat probably would be in Turin.

Other reports indicated that Badoglio's military leaders were firmly established at Turin and Milan in northern Italy, however, and that the German-sponsored Italian government might have to find its seat in Germany.

Italians Harass Nazis

Nevertheless, it was admitted that at some places Italian troops had taken to "harassing actions" against the German forces in Italy and that in some cases where the Germans attempted to disarm the Italians there had been clashes. Dispatches from Bern, in fact, said an Italian vanguard was leading Allied troops northward from their beachheads near Naples.

Germany appeared to have been left virtually alone amid her wavering Axis satellites and the oppressed millions of Europe by the capitulation of Italy.

(A Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch from Chiasso, on the Italian border, said the Italian garrison at Genoa was sharply resisting German troops, who were said to have occupied the entire city. Other reports said German divisions were advancing toward all the principal ports on the Ligurian Sea above Naples as a precaution against more Allied landings.)

May Be Inland Battle

Along with stories from London telling of the severe pummeling of Nazi airfields in France by Allied bombers, Swedish newspapers printed reports from Germany that Nazi military chieftains expect the next big battle to be fought where the Allies will not be able to utilize their skill in amphibious warfare.

These dispatches gave no other hint of the location of the probable battleground, but said the Germans held a "healthy respect" for British-American landing operations.

Nazi officials made it clear that hundreds of thousands of Italians would be kept in Germany to work, by force, if necessary.

New Reich Urged In Red Broadcast

The free German National Committee, recently formed in Moscow, broadcast to the German people today a declaration that "Hitler must be forced to resign and make way for a new German government."

The broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission declared that chaos threatened Germany, and the only way to avert it is for German forces to withdraw to the Reich frontier.

Italians in Greece Told to Ignore All Nazis, Allies Also

Cairo, Sept. 9 (AP).—Italian Gen. Carlo Vecchiarelli told Italian garrisons in Greece via the Athens radio last night to "have no dealings with either the Germans, British or Americans," Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied Middle Eastern command, disclosed tonight.

Smiling grimly, General Wilson said: "He'll get nowhere with that policy. If the Italians persist in that policy, their food and all supplies can and will be cut off."

General Wilson had asked Italian soldiers and others to "take possession by force of all fronts occupied by the Germans in the Dodecanese Islands."

Penicillin Treatment Aids Infected Girl

Macon, Ga., Sept. 9 (AP).—Anne Shirley Carter, 15, for whom a supply of penicillin was flown from New York Saturday in an Army bomber, today was reported to be "out of danger" by authorities at the hospital where she lay near death for several days before arrival of the drug.

She was stricken with a streptococcus infection about two weeks ago.

Reds Claim Credit For Italy's Defeat

War Sidelights

Nazis Hedge On Victory Monuments

Stockholm, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Germans have notified the Swedish stone industry to halt the quarrying of granite which they had ordered for the postwar construction of German victory monuments and official Nazi buildings.

Italy News in Spain

Madrid, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Spanish press printed the announcement of Italy's surrender today, but found it of less interest than a visit by Generalissimo Francisco Franco to a youth camp and a speech by the Falange party secretary.

The Newspaper Arriba found room for the capitulation well down toward the bottom of a page, and none of the newspapers offered comment.

Pacific Aid Promised

Guadalcanal, Solomon Islands, Sept. 5 (Delayed) (AP).—Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, director of production for the War Department, inspected this area today and Patterson declared:

"Future operations to the north look good. We are going to have more equipment, planes and ships entering the Solomons campaign."

(Since this was written, Patterson left Guadalcanal. He arrived in Honolulu yesterday.)

Soviets Slew Best Fascist Divisions, Official Press Says

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Sept. 9.—News of Italy's capitulation was received jubilantly in the Soviet Union, where it was attributed largely to the Red army's victories on the eastern front.

It was interpreted to mean that the way is now open for the early defeat of Germany. The broken Axis camp, said the government newspaper Izvestia, "is approaching its catastrophe."

The official newspaper Izvestia said in explaining the Italian surrender:

"It is because of defeats on the Soviet front in which all contingents of picked Italian troops were exterminated.

"The victory of the Red army gave our Allies the possible opportunity to land troops in Sicily."

Claims Duce Asked Arms

Premier Mussolini appealed to Hitler on July 18 and 19 for arms, Izvestia said, but the Germans were tied up on the Orel and Belgorod fronts and were unable to spare them.

"Events on the Soviet-German front," said Izvestia, "determined the whole international situation. . . . Every blow of the Red army makes all the links of the Hitlerite chain shake."

The government organ estimated that Italy during three years of war lost more than a million of her best troops, most of them on the Don, Voronezh and northern Donets fronts.

The official Russian press had reserved judgment overnight, but came out today with the claim that the Red army deserves the lion's share of the credit for Italy's capitulation.

Reports of the negotiations and subsequent surrender of Italy were fully published here and the dispatches underlined the fact that the armistice conditions were approved by the Soviet Union.

No Official Comment

No official comment from responsible Soviet authorities was immediately available.

Despite the expression of pleasure at the news, the reaction of the Russian man in the street was also that of skepticism as to the exact size of the battle of Italy and what the future effect of these battles would be on the situation on the Soviet-German Front.

Until the Germans begin drawing away large numbers of divisions from the Soviet front, the Allied operations cannot be considered a second front, is the conclusion of the man in the street.

The first sign of the Soviet reaction was a cartoon entitled "Serious Amputation," by Boris Yefimov, published in the Soviet army newspaper, Red Star. It showed two hands on the left, presumably Russian, cutting the Italian leg off Adolf Hitler.

People who heard the news on the way to work discussed it excitedly and agreed that "more big things are coming."

264,000,000 Lbs. Of U.S. Fats, Oils Sent to Russia

The War Food Administration announced yesterday that this country delivered 264 million pounds of edible fats and oils to Soviet Russia during the first seven months of this year, under lend-lease agreement.

This corresponded to 115 million pounds during the same months last year and was made up of lard, shortening, butter, oleomargarin, tallow, oleo oil, and vegetable oils.

In its regular monthly report on deliveries of food and other agricultural commodities to Allied fighting fronts, WFA said July shipments totaled about 1,250,000,000 pounds and were the largest for any month since lend-lease operations opened in 1941.

Approximately 10 per cent of the country's food supply has been sent abroad under lend-lease this year, compared to about 6 per cent in 1942. Meats still accounted for the greatest number of pounds, with dairy and poultry products coming second, and fats and oils third.

THE HEROIC WOUNDED RETURN—Pvt. Clifton A. Matthews, wounded veteran of the African campaign, being placed in an ambulance at Silver Spring, Md., yesterday for transport to Walter Reed Hospital

By Hanson H. Hathaway
Post Staff Writer

Home from the Nation's wars came 77 wounded veterans of the African and Sicilian campaigns yesterday.

As the sun slanted across the Maryland Hills the three-car Army Medical Department train brought them into a Silver Spring siding.

From there they were unloaded and ambulance-convoyed to nearby Walter Reed Hospital, final stopping place for treatment as full and complete as a grateful Nation's medical skill can provide.

Evacuated early yesterday morning from Brentwood Hospital on Long Island, and from Halloran Hospital on Staten Island, the 77, including 21 so seriously wounded as to still be carried on stretchers, were grateful their long trip from foreign battlefields had come 'to end.

And, among the litter-borne wounded, was one who spoke for them all. He was Pfc. Clifton A. Mathews, 23, member of the 156th Infantry, crack African unit.

Raising his head perkily from his litter pillow as he was carefully removed from the side of a hospital coach, Mathews waved the bandaged stump of his left arm in happy greeting to a line of spectators behind a cordon of watchful military police.

Later, being placed in the bed at Walter Reed that will be his "headquarters" for some time to come, Mathews expressed his joy at being there.

"There's nothing like coming home," he said softly. "A lot of us had begun to think we'd never see home again."

Asked what thing he most wanted now he replied:

"To get well again and to hear Kate Smith sing 'America, I Love You.' "Boy! It's wonderful."

Mathews was wounded by the explosion of a shell at St. Cloud in Algiers, June 24 this year. He is a native of the little town of Lawrence on Long Island.

The train's arrival was unheralded but word soon sped through Silver Spring and a crowd gathered, to be augmented by motorists attracted by the gathering and the row of ambulances alongside the train.

Strict military police kept overeager citizens from rushing the train for close-ups of the stretcher cases as they were taken rapidly out by fast working hospital corpsmen. Only those bearing special permits were permitted inside the military police lines, augmented by Silver Spring officers.

Most of the litter-confined men were too ill or tired to talk after their trip from the North. But, from a huge Army bus the ambulatory or walking cases expressed themselves variously.

"The Italian mop-up means we're that much closer to Germany."

"We'll soon be pushing those Japs in the face.

"Glad to be here? Say, fella, the desert was never like this.

"War ain't hell anymore," sang one spirited youngster.

The bugle strains of "Retreat" floated brassily across the emerald landscaping of the Army Medical Center when the first ambulance pulled into the unloading platform.

Veterans on Scene

Long hospitalized wounded veterans, crutched or walking stiffly on unfamiliar artificial limbs, came up to watch with experienced curiosity as the task of unloading began.

Each stretcher-borne young warrior added a facet to a picture of war. Men came out of the ambulances with legs gone. Here was one with an arm gone. Here one havily bandaged about the head. Another lay white and quiet on his cot, the whiteness of immaculate sheet seemingly no whiter than his drawn face.

But each managed a grin at their buddies and the few civilians still visitors on the medical reservation.

Whatever their innermost thoughts were was theirs and hardly to be guessed at; but, as the Flag descended outside the school building to the strains of "Retreat," one of the stretcher-borne closed his eyes.

We looked at him as efficient hands brought him from the ambulance.

Allies Smash Mafia, Band Of Sicilian Extortionists

By Michael Chinigo
Representing the Combined American Press Distributed by the Associated Press

With American Forces in Sicily, Sept. 9.—The Mafia, Sicilian extortionist gang which Fascism tried for years to run out and then incorporated as one of its own criminal appendages, has been smashed from the top.

Two of its notorious ring leaders, Domenico Tomaselli and Giuseppe Piraino, and 17 district bosses were nabbed in a joint British-American coup in which even Scotland Yard had a hand.

All of them are safely behind bars and the responsible Allied authorities have enough leads on the other regional chiefs to insure their capture.

Mafia men already in prison and those on the way to joining them controlled the black market, which still has a stranglehold on Sicilian life. It follows, therefore, that breaking the Mafia gang means breaking the black market.

It is true also that within the secret society there are men who have fought Fascism since its inception, men of unquestionable integrity who shunned all ties with the sprawling majority of the Fascistized profiteers.

This small minority, genuinely interested in the future of Sicily, has been one of the first to denounce the activity of the others.

Operations which led to the first raid and roundup of these criminals followed the plot pattern of a movie thriller with Italo-American Louis Bassi, Stockton, Calif., technician fifth grade, in the hero role.

The curtain on this real life drama of intrigue rose a few weeks back, when the Third Division, then on the Messina drive with the Forty-fifth Division, looked for a quiet inland town for its rear echelon administration services and chose Castel D'Accia, directly inland from Trabia, which is roughly 22 miles from Palermo.

Making use of his Italian to gain the confidence of the man in the street, Technician Bassi, quickly discovered that the tiny hamlet, famous for the best Sicilian wine, was nothing more or less than the Mafia fortress.

He reported to his colonel, investigated by day and by night alone and reported again and again until he had accumulated enough evidence for an open and shut case against the racketeers.

Reds Take Rail Junction on Kiev Pathway

pol. The Germans said the beachhead was "sealed off" and the Russians were "facing annihilation."

Even without the landings, the Soviet troops have driven 80 miles in two days as Nazi resistance appeared to be collapsing in this sector. Petrovka, 30 miles southwest of Stalino and 44 miles northwest of Mariupol, was taken yesterday, in advances up to 10 miles, the Soviet communique said.

A BBC broadcast reported Russian patrols 31 miles from Pavlograd which is 40 miles east of Dnieperopetrovsk.

These advances in south Russia mean increasing peril for the German garrisons in the Crimea and the Novorossisk area of the Caucasus.

With the capture of Bakhmach and Nedrygailov, the Soviets were moving toward Priluki, 80 miles east of Kiev, and Nezhin is 75 miles from this major base. A general Soviet advance of six miles took 80 hamlets in this area, the communique said.

Moving on Bryansk from the north and south, the Red army captured 40 villages.

South of Bryansk, 40 villages and settlements fell to the Russians who advanced up to seven miles. Lyudinovo, 45 miles north of Bryansk, also fell to Soviet attackers.

The victory at Bakhmach, announced by Marshal Stalin in a triumphant order of the day to Gen. Constantin Rokossovsky, virtually split the German central and southern defenses in Russia.

Bakhmach is 15 miles west of Konotop and 110 miles northeast of Kiev. Troops which captured Borzna yesterday are less than 100 miles from Kiev, capital of the Ukraine and fourth city of Russia. Bakhmach is a junction for the Moscow-Kiev railway and another leading from Gomel in White Russia to Kremenchug on the Dnieper.

The city was taken by storm after a bitter two-day battle.

Stalin in his communication spoke of Bakhmach as "a decisive strongpoint in the Kiev direction," the first time the Russians officially had mentioned Kiev in connection with the north Ukraine drive and apparently indicating that they expect soon to carry the Germans back to the distant citadel on the banks of the Middle Dnieper.

The victory broadened the whole offensive front. In addition to virtually splitting the German central and southern defenses, it cut one of the last lateral railways short of the Pripet Marshes. The city had been flanked to the northwest in a Russian sweep that has been averaging close to 10 miles a day for a week and a half.

Stalin ordered Moscow's 124 victory cannon to thunder salutes of 12 salvoes.

Moscow advices said troops in the northern Ukraine had reached the Desna River on a broad front between Borzna and Shostka and were consolidating their hold to facilitate later crossings to the west bank. The Desna flows into the Dnieper just north of Kiev.

At one point in their advance through Nikolayevka, Moscow said the Red Army was but 60 miles short of Dnieperopetrovsk and within 35 miles of a junction of the Stalino-Dnieperopetrovsk and Kharkov-Zaporozhe railways. Capture of the junction would complicate the German position in the Crimea.

The German communique, broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said the Russians "are throwing fresh forces into the battle" in the Donets Basin.

Air Blows Vital, Gen. Marshall Says

Long-Range Strategy Reflected in Weakening Defense by Foe on All European Fronts

John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Allied aerial blows against strategic objectives in Nazi Europe—soon to be doubled in intensity with the acquisition of bases in Italy—give promise of being a decisive factor in the defeat of Germany, General George C. Marshall declares.

Discussing the air phases of the global war in his report to the Secretary of War, the Army chief of staff tells of the growth of the Army Air Forces within two years from a skeletonized unit of 206 squadrons to the most powerful aerial armada of all times.

Growth Remarkable

Although limited by appropriations prior to the war, the AAF has managed, "in a remarkably short time" to produce combat planes which match or surpass those of the enemy, he states.

Problems and accomplishments of the Army Air Forces during the conflict are "so colossal in scope" that its real inside story can only be told by its chief, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Marshall declares. Nevertheless, his views on the aerial side of America's war effort form an important part of the history of the great struggle.

General Marshall's statement agrees with neither the extreme air advocates nor the conservative ground soldiers on the importance of air power. He does not say that intensive bombing of Europe can so soften Germany our armies can march in and occupy. On the other hand, he does not deny it.

Objectives Listed

The Chief of Staff contents himself with declaring the bomber offensive "gives promise of being a decisive factor in the ultimate destruction of the German citadel. He also lists its objectives, to wit:

(1) Reduction of the Nazi air combat strength to "Virtual impotence."

(2) Disruption of "vital elements" of the enemy's lines of communications.

(3) "Progressive destruction and dislocation of the German military, industrial and economic system."

(4) "The resulting psychological impact on the German people, the undermining of their morale and their willingness to continue to support the war effort."

"Thus," he sums up, "the objective of the combined bomber offensive is the elimination of both the German ability and will to continue to wage war."

Expansion Outlined

Reporting expansion of the Army Air Forces to a strength of 182,000 officers and 1,906,000 men, Marshall comments on the virtual autonomy given Arnold and his aides in accomplishing the task.

While withholding figures as to the plane strength of AAF, Marshall gives some data as to the training of pilots and mechanics which exemplifies its great expansion. During the 19 years prior to 1941, he reveals, the number of aviators trained was less than 7000, while today about 75,000 pilots are being turned out annually "not including glider, liaison, observation and women pilots."

This does not include a "substantial" training program of British, Dutch, Canadian and Chinese fliers at American Army air training centers. The program for the training of Chinese pilots, the chief of staff says, "has had an important bearing on operations against the Japanese and is continuously expanding."

As to enlisted technicians, in the 20 years prior to July 1, 1941, the Army schools graduated less than 15,000 mechanics. In the two years which followed, 625,000 such specialist were trained.

Discussing the long controverted question of the efficiency of American precision bombing, General Marshall says it has proved itself in the great aerial offensive against Europe.

Daylight Operations

"The British heavy bomber command,' he states on this point, "was developed for the purpose of carrying out night missions, while the American Flying Fortresses and Liberators were developed for daylight operations. In the British planes, speed and armament were limited in favor of long range and heavy bomb loads . . .

"The violence of the German fighter plane reaction to our daylight attacks is convincing evidence of the deadly effect of precision bombing. The enemy must find a counter to this technique or accept the emasculation of his industries and his fighter command."

Allied operations against German submarine bases and building yards furnish a good example of how the American daylight precision bombing and the British "area" or mass night bombing supplement each other and cause damage to the enemy, Marshall states.

Strategy Explained

"These bombing operations, together with the action of the anti-submarine command and Allied destroyers and escort vessels, appear to be in process of driving the submarine from the seas," the Chief of Staff declares.

Summing up as to the effectiveness of great aerial offensive against Europe, General Marshall says:

"Perhaps the greatest tribute to the heavy bomber effort was the enemy's recognition of its importance. These attacks caused him to increase his production of fighter aircraft at the expense of bombers, to allocate new production largely to the Western Front, to withdraw experienced single-engined fighter pilots from the Russian and Mediterranean fronts for the defense of Germany and later to withdraw fighter aircraft from Russia.

"The net result was the Germans were unable to conduct any sustained offensives this summer in Russia or build up sufficient strength in the central Mediterranean to oppose the Allied offensive."

Three Army Planes To Be Christened 'University of Md.'

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Three Army trainer planes 'purchased' by University of Maryland students will be christened and turned over to the Army at the Fairchild Aircraft Plant in Hagerstown Saturday.

Immediately afterward the planes will be flown to Army bases.

Maryland students raised $45,000 to purchase the planes through a war bond and stamp drive on the campus this summer.

The aircraft will be christened by Miss Dorothy Coseboom of Takoma Park, Md., director of the campus war bond drive and Miss Ruth Buchanon, Washington, D. C. They will be named "The University of Maryland No. 1," No. 2 and No. 3, and will be dedicated to university men in the Army Air Corps.

Miss Buchanon is chairman of the student victory council which sponsored the drive.

Allied Troops Close on Lae; Defenses Bombed Into Ruin

By Vern Haugland
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, (Friday) Sept. 10.—Australian troops have closed to within 2 miles of the Malahang airdrome at Lae, New Guinea, and the Japanese defenses of Lae have been reduced "to practical ruin" by more than 500 tons of bombs dropped by Allied planes in less than a week.

Softening up the enemy air and shipping base for capture by Allied forces advancing virtually unopposed from both the northeast and northwest through difficult jungle terrain, Allied Liberators and Mitchells have demolished enemy artillery, destroyed or disrupted installations and heavily punished the Japanese garrison, headquarters said today.

New big guns are being rolled forward to add their fire power in devastating the isolated enemy garrison.

Allied warships ventured once more into narrow waters between New Guinea and New Britain to shell the Huon Peninsula coastal area around Finschhafen, 60 miles above Lae.

Allied paratroopers and Australian reinforcements who have been landing since September 5 in the Markham Valley behind Lae are "approaching the main western bastion of the enemy's prepared positions at Heaths Plantation," headquarters said.

Earlier in the week Heaths Plantation defenses virtually were demolished by a heavy Allied air attack.

Since the new operations were sprung on Lae there has been no mention of any heavy Japanese resistance.

Allied warships also put in an appearance near Salamaua, bombarding the waterfront and shooting down at least two of the enemy planes which attacked them. A third plane probably was downed. The communique said the warships which shelled the Finschhafen area were "light surface units," probably destroyers.

Action in the Solomons was confined to American raids on Bougainville and Kolombangara Islands.

'Skin Bank' Sought For War Wounds

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 9 (INS).—A "skin bank," similar to Red Cross plasma banks, was proposed tonight as a means of treating war wounds and burns.

Dr. Dolan Meeker, New York physician and biochemist, told the research conference of Institutem Divi Thomae that a skin bank would eliminate the necessity of emergency grafting operations. The process of removing the donation of healthy donors, he said, is not necessarily painful.

Three German Officers Flee Colorado Camp

Trinidad, Colo., Sept. 9 (INS).—Three German army officers escaped today from the war prisoners' camp near Trinidad, it was announced by Col. Jesse Marshall, district commander of the internal security department.

Colonel Marshall said the fugitives were members of the Nazi Afrika Corps. The break occurred barely 36 hours after two other escaped prisoners were returned to the camp after having fled last Saturday.

Air Traffic Runs Wild Over France

Like Times Square, Reporter Says; U. S. Displays Numerical Edge

By the Associated Press

At A U. S. Bombing Base in England, Sept. 9.—Traffic over northern France today looked like Times Square at its wildest.

Virtually sky-darkening formations of American Flying Fortresses, supported by clouds of Thunderbolts, gave a demonstration of their crushing air superiority.

"There were so many forts in the air today it looked like Times Square on New Year's Eve," observed Sergt. Clifford M. Hart of Wenatchee, Wash., top turret gunner, who participated in a raid on Vitry-en-Artois.

Lieut. John G. Winant, jr., son of the American Ambassador to Great Britain, who piloted the Fort "Tech Supply" in a raid on Beaumont, said, "there were millions of German fighters up there today but the American P-47s (Thunderbolts) took care of them. I saw some flak off the right wing, but only got one hole. That is a record for my ship."

While some formations encountered heavy fighter opposition, others were virtually free to bomb at will, particularly in an attack on the Lille-Nord airfield.

Sergt. Basil Magineau of Dearborn, Mich., waist gunner, said he had nothing to do, so he had a real opportunity to observe the bombing at Lille-Vendeville.

"I personally think that field will never be used by enemy fighters again," he commented.

Praise for the Thunderbolts came from Tech. Sergt. Warren O. Thomas of Pendleton, Oreg., radio operator on the Fritz Blitz, who said "even if the Germans broke through, Thunderbolts were right on them before they made a pass." His formation attacked Beaumont.

Of a raid on Beauvais, Lieut. William O. Hubba of Crawfordsville, Ind., a former actor for Warner Bros., reported:

"I saw one of Goering's squadrons approaching our formation, but they dove down and went around after the P47's started for them."

Lieut. Anthony C. Gospodar of Elk River, Minn., a navigator, remarked, "We walked across the coast and dropped bombs on an airfield."

Allies Raid French Coast

Belgium and shot down one of the few enemy fighters encountered.

Two fighters lost on these operations raised to 10 the announced total of Allied losses for the day—two heavy bombers, three medium bombers and five fighters.

In their record operations, the American raiders blasted targets in nine areas of northern France. Chief target of the Fortresses in the Paris area was an airplane engine factory. Among Nazi airfields hit by the Americans were those at Lille-Vendeville, Beauvais-Lille and Vitry-E Artois.

The day's losses for the Allies were announced as eight ships—two heavy bombers, three medium bombers and three fighters.

The channel invasion show—mock today; perhaps reality very soon—climaxed the eighth consecutive day of terrific aerial offensive which may form the final prelude to assault upon Europe from the west. It was accompanied by far-flung operations whose reverberations rocked buildings 6 miles inland in England.

Bombers Unopposed

So tremendous was the muscle-flexing demonstration, carried on under the noses of Nazi coastal defenses, that many British coastal dwellers were convinced the invasion of France was actually under way.

But a terse official summary said only: "Full-scale amphibious exercises were . . . most successful. Valuable lessons were learned."

And as remarkable as the maneuvers were the almost utter absence of resistance by the dwindling German air force to the aerial coastal onslaught. Allied bombers, many unescorted, droned through the skies unopposed, not one falling to Nazi air units charged with defending the western bastion of Hitler's Europe.

The daylight operations, which began shortly after 7 a. m., followed night bombardment of occupied territory by RAF planes.

Old Battle in Reverse

"It was like the battle of Britain the other way around," said a resident of the Dover-Folkestone road in describing the terrific prerehearsal bombing which kept the French coastline alight all night with bomb bursts and anti-aircraft fire. Enemy naval vessels and coast artillery were the prime targets of this bombardment.

Then with the dawn U. S. Flying Fortresses and RAF fighter-bombers struck at more airfields and other targets in northern France. Then followed Thunderbolts and Spitfires—to patrol the Channel skies and make sweeps in northern France as the advance of the umbrella.

Next rose hundreds of other planes as Combined Operations put out its amphibious fleet that choked the Channel with impunity under the shadow of Nazi coastal guns.

War Contract Renegotiation Saving Shown

Recoveries to the Government of nearly four billion dollars from renegotiation of war contracts and resulting price adjustments yesterday were reported to the House Ways and Means Committee by four Government war contracting agencies.

These total savings, through July 31, were estimated by Maurice Karker, chairman of the War Department's price adjustment board, as the committee opened hearings on proposals to revise the renegotiation law or even repeal it.

4 Billion Recovered

With only about a third of war contracts adjusted, Karker told the committee the War and Navy Departments, the Maritime Commission and the Treasury have recovered $1,787,923,000 from war contract renegotiation alone and saved $2,167,922,000 from price readjustments.

To suggestions that the law be repealed in favor of excess profits taxation, Karker told the committee he is convinced it is impossible to devise a tax formula that will do the same job with reasonable justice to contractors.

Procedure Criticized

Some Capitol taxmakers have complained the renegotiation law doesn't give existing excess profits taxes a change to function. Karker testified only by renegotiation can the real excess profits be sifted out.

He called it "the best and only effective substitute in time of war for the control of open competition in time of peace."

"It is a dangerous and un-American statute," he said, "but we are in a dangerous and destructive situation that justifies unusual procedures."

Reprisals Discounted

A suggestion that war contractors themselves hesitate to testify on renegotiation for fear of reprisals by the price adjustment agencies drew a denial from Karker. Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas read a letter from a contractor who said he didn't want "to be put in the doghouse with the Government" by appearing in the hearings. Karker said there is or will be no thought of reprisals.

Possibility of amendment of the law to give renegotiators authority to guarantee a minimum rate of profit to contractors who suffer losses on war contracts developed from questioning of Karker by Chairman Robert L. Doughton.

The witness said he personally thought such a provision would strengthen the statute and further reduce the cost of the war by making for closer pricing. Contractors now must allow sufficient margin to guard against loss. Karker estimated that 6 or 7 per cent of contracts renegotiated show a loss to the contractor.

Tax Deductions Opposed

The War Department witness said a suggestion for an over-all policy board to coordinate the various price-adjustment agencies is "practical, desirable and is now being worked out."

Karker favored power for the boards to compel any recalcitrant contractors to comply with the renegotiation terms, with the contractors given clear right of appeal to the courts.

He said any provision for post-war reserves for industry should be written into the tax law and not left for the board to provide through upward adjustment of prices.

He opposed deduction of taxes as an item of production cost before renegotiation of contracts.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Six Jap Cargo Ships Sunk By U. S. Subs, 4 Damaged

United States submarines have destroyed six more Japanese merchant vessels and damaged four others, the Navy disclosed yesterday.

The vessels sunk were listed in a communique as one small and two large freighters, one medium tanker and one large and one medium cargo ship.

Damaged were one large and two small cargo carriers and a medium sized freighters.

The latest report raised to 223 the number of enemy ships of all types which have been reported sunk by American submarines and to 319 the total of thise sunk or damaged.

American undersea raiders, which often operate in waters immediately adjacent to the Japanese home islands, are carrying the main force of the attack on enemy shipping. Secretary Knox disclosed earlier this week that they had been chiefly instrumental in Allied destruction of one-third of Japan's cargo and transport ships.

The rate of destruction by submarines is increasing, Knox said, and the belief here is that if it can be further increased with the dispatch of additional new submarines to the western Pacific and China Sea areas the Japanese will find it in some cases impossible to maintain their more distant military outposts. They will also face serious obstacles in developing the natural wealth they captured in Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

were certain these dealers were not releasing any gasoline except for coupons.

But, they also said, it was impossible to check the sources of all the coupons turned in by a retailer.

From other sources it was learned that the price usually paid by a dealer buying "surplus" C coupons, for instance, was $1 for eight coupons, which he made up by selling gasoline without coupons at higher prices.

Fathers' Draft Ban Opposed By 2 Generals

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Two high-ranking Administration military manpower leaders warned Congress yesterday that to ban the drafting of fathers, or to take second-line physical specimens instead, would force a drastic shift in America's war plans.

The officials were Maj. Gen. Miller G. White, assistant Army chief of staff for personnel, and Lieut. Col. Francis V. Keesling, jr., chief liaison and legislative officer for the Selective Service System.

Reporting to the Senate Military Committee, General White said to fill up combat units training in this country with physically substandard men would reduce our power to exploit a success in any overseas theater.

Views Challenged

Colonel Keesling testified a prohibition against inducting fathers, apparently, would "require the high command to change its war plans or attempt to carry them out with a smaller quantity of an inferior quality of military and naval power than the high command estimated it would require."

A sharp challenge of this view was raised by Senator Downey (Democrat) of California, conducting the hearing, who said "in my opinion" the military forces are large enough at the present time to do their job. He agreed, however, with Colonel Keesling's recommendation further hearings precede final action on the bill of Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana to grant pre-Pearl Harbor fathers blanket deferment to January 1.

Approved by Group

The bill was approved by the Senate military committee before recess, and Senator Wheeler has announced he would seek to call it up quickly after Congress returns next Tuesday.

At the same time, it was learned several Senators, who had planned to support Wheeler's move were planning to switch and oppose it. The shift was large enough to convince Administration strategists that while the Wheeler bill might have received quick attention if the Senate had been in session a couple of weeks ago, it is now likely to remain dormant on the Senate calendar. Biggest reason for the shift in potential votes on the Wheeler bill was understood to be that members hesitate to interefere in war plans at a time when these plans have been working out with high success.

The division of opinion between leveling off the armed forces now, because the war plans are proving successful, and leaving things alone, for the same reason, was matched by the apparent division between Colonel Keesling and the statement of the day before by Selective Service Director Hershey.

General Hershey had greeted the fall of Italy with the statement "we probably won't have to mobilize as many men for the remainder of the war as we have in the past."

Senator Downey indicated he had been much impressed by General Hershey's prediction. At the same time high War Manpower Commission officials denied the quick capitulation of Italy meant plans for drafting fathers now could be dropped.

These plans, Colonel Keesling pointed out, call for the drafting of 446,000 fathers before the end of this year, after allowing for the maximum that are expected to come from the occupationally deferred, physically substandard, and teen-age groups.

Highway Recreation Budgets Hiked by Higher Costs

$500 for school custodians and $12,250 for part-time leadership jobs to supervise playground activities.

Capital outlay for the improvement of various municipal playground and recreational centers, including erection of shelter houses and landscaping, amounts to $77,300, an increase of $44,800 over the current year.

Highway Budget Rises

The 1945 budget, submitted by the highway department, estimated increases of $2,208,000 over the current year. The 1944 appropriation had the benefit of a carryover of approximately $1,000,000 from the 1943 expenditures.

The total requested is $3,385,330. The 1944 appropriation was $1,177,266.

Another item which materially reduces the amount of the increase is $750,000 requested to supplement last year's appropriation of one million dollars for construction of the South Capitol Street bridge. Due to war priorities the work has never started but the million dollar allotment was made available for this year in case priorities could be obtained.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, said the $750,000 would be sufficient to complete the project if it would be recognized by the War Production Board as a wartime necessity.

The bridge would shorten the route between downtown Washington and military facilities in Maryland including Bolling Field.

Personnel services of the department will cost approximately $310,330 for the next fiscal year representing an increase of $59,084.

Street maintenance requires $1,145,000. Of this sum $45,000 is for snow removal and the balance for street repairs. The increase of $150,000 over current expenditures arises from wartime conditions, street replacements being out of the question. It was also said that heavy truck traffic over the streets has necessitated a much greater increase in repairs.

The budget stated the replacement value of improved streets and roads in the District is approximately $77,600,000. The street system contains about 955 miles of roadways. Of this sum more than 50 miles of paved streets have been in service over 25 years. It was pointed out that within the last few years mileage has increased 14 miles.

In addition there are over 1413 miles of sidewalks in the District and 370 miles of alleys.

Captain Whitehurst said the public demand, especially from the outlying districts, for improvements to meet modern conditions far exceeds the department's ability to meet them.

Lieut. Eaton, Wounded, Dies In Germany

First Lieut. Cyrus Eaton, jr., nephew of Representative Charles A. Eaton, ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, died of wounds he received in air combat over the Netherlands some weeks ago, the War Department has notified his father in Cleveland.

Lieutenant Eaton, an Army Air Forces pilot, was operations officers of his medium bomber squadron and had been listed as missing until the International Red Cross advised the War Department of his death, which was announced by the German government.

His father is a Cleveland banker and industrialist. A year ago Lieutenant Eaton was married to Mary Margaret Stephens, daughter of Frank M. Stephens, vice president and general manager of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co.

Arlington Man Lost

Ensign James Paul Angelo, 28-year-old graduate of Georgetown University and husband of Mrs. Louise C. Angelo, 1821 North Rhodes st., Arlington, is among five men reported missing yesterday by the Navy.

Another Washingtonian, Francis Alvin Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cleverson Thompson, Anacostia Station, was among 13 enlisted men reported wounded.

Ensign Angelo's wife, the former Miss Louise Cowie, is the daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. George D. Cowie of Washington.

Upon obtaining a bachelor of foreign service degree at Georgetown in 1937, Ensign Angelo was awarded the Prince deLigne Medal by the Belgian Ambassador for an outstanding thesis on Belgium. He also was awarded a medal for achievement in international law.

From December of 1937 to the fall of 1942 when he joined the Navy, he was employed by the State Department.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Angelo, Charleston, W. Va.

Yesterday's list brought to 29,275 the total of Navy, Marine and Coast Guard casualties reported since December 7, 1942. The total includes 10,116 dead, 5166 wounded, 9382 missing and 4161 prisoners of war.

Two Navy Officers Lost on Flight To Washington

A two-seated advanced Navy training plane that took off from Norfolk on a routine flight to Anacostia Air Base at 5:10 p. m. Tuesday has disappeared.

The Navy has notified next of kin that the two occupants are missing. They are Comdr. Robert W. Bedilion, 43, of 1604 Crestwood dr., Alexandria, and Lieut. (j. g.) Newell Van Sickle, USNR, 25, of Indianapolis, the pilot.

At her Alexandria home, Mrs. Bedilion anxiously awaited further news of the Navy's search, which began after the plane failed to reach Anacostia.

Commander Bedilion was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1922.

Standley Lauds Allied Victories

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Co. last night quoted a Moscow broadcast by Admiral William H. Standley, US Ambassador to Russia, in which he hailed the defeat of Italy and praised the Red army for its success against the Germans in the Donets Basin.

"I know that I speak for my fellow-countrymen when I congratulate the Red army on its great victory in the Donets Basin, and I know that I voice the sentiments of the Russian people in congratulating the Allied forces who have compelled the surrender of Italy," he said. "The victory of one of the United Nations is a victory for all."

Medal Won By District Air Gunner

Staff Sergt. Samuel Edwards, 32, of 1412 Floral st. nw., gunner on a Flying Fortress in England, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, the War Department announced yesterday.

Sergeant Edwards, who was reported in The Post July 15 to have made 25 successful bombing trips, was among 350 officers and enlisted men of the USA Eighth Air Force who were decorated.

A native of Philadelphia, Sergeant Edwards came to Washington at the age of 9, and attended local schools. He went to the University of Maryland, and attended a law school in Baltimore.

The following Virginia and Maryland men also were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross: Second Lieut. Pelham R. Burnett, Baltimore; Second Lieut. Emil L. Johnson, Baltimore; Tech. Sergt. Jacob K. Kirn, Ellicott City, Md.; Staff Sergt. William V. Baker, Havre de Grace, Md.; Staff Sergt. Milton B. Edwards, Laurel, Md.; Staff Sergt. Ray J. Smith, Easton, Md.; Capt. Hershell Echoll Parsons, St. Charles, Va.; Staff Sergt. Ralph B. Adams, Roanoke, Va.; Sergt. John E. Owens, Roanoke.

Staff Sergt. Ray W. Armstrong of Cantonsville, Md. received the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Flying Cross and Warrant Officer Alexander B. Sabo of Hampton, Va., was awarded the Soldier's Medal.

Child in Pennsy Wreck Sought Mother—Vainly

Philadelphia, Sept. 9 (AP).—Eight-year-old Ian Macauley's oft-repeated question, "Where's my mummie?" was answered today.

Ian was taken from the wreckage of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Congressional Limited Monday night, slightly hurt, but no trace was found of his mother, Mrs. Marion Berry Macauley, New York magazine writer and divorced wife of Thurston Macauley, former London newspaper correspondent.

Today Mrs. Macauley's brother, G. L. Berry, jr., of Atlanta, visited the city morgue, viewed several bodies taken from the wreckage, and identified one as that of Ian's mother.

PUC and FCC Study Hotel Phone Charges

The question of whether local hotels were within their rights in making extra charges to their guests for long distance telephone calls was considered yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission and the Public Utilities Commission.

At the same hearing the commissions sought to determine which body had jurisdiction over the regulations of interzone message unit charges for suburban telephone service furnished by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

FCC Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction is claimed by the FCC on the basis they constitute a form of long distance call. This opinion was concurred in by Gregory Hankin, minority member of the PUC while PUC Commissioner Col. Charles W. Kutz and Chairman James Flanagan agreed with the American Association of Railroad and Public Utility Commissions that the PUC was the proper body to exercise control.

In the telephone dispute, T. Brooke Price, counsel for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., testified the surcharge on long-distance telephone calls made by hotels was not the responsibility of the telephone company. He questioned authority of the commissions to interfere in the policy of the hotels, but added if the company was instructed to discontinue service to customers where a surcharge was made, the order would be complied with without referring to the jurisdictional question.

Extra Service Explained

He said there was no difference in the contracts let to hotels other than the prewar ruling of the Postmaster General that where a hotel offers service directly to the public, such as pay booths, no surcharge is allowed and also when a hotel guest leaves without paying his bill, the hotel company may remit the charges.

Attorney Joseph McGarraghy, counsel for the hotel association, testified under privilege because the association had not been made a party to the proceedings.

He said no surcharges on long distance calls had been made but extra charges had been added as hotel accomodation charges and not as a part of the telephone bill. This was explained by saying follow-ups on long distance calls, withholding undesired calls and other extra services constituted a direct hotel service and should be charged for.

Father Gets Purple Heart In Son's Death

Joe Aquilino, who was born in Foggia, Italy, 59 years ago, isn't one bit sorry that Italy has surrendered.

But Joe isn't rejoicing either, because he's got a lot of things on his mind. On August 30, a telegram from the War Department came to his home at 1222 6th st. sw. Corpl. Frank Aquilino, 27, Joe's third oldest boy, had been killed in action in the southwest Pacific area July 27.

Thorough Americans

Joe Aquilino is American all the way through. He came to the States in 1909; his wife, Lucy, also born in Foggia, joined him a year later. Joe started as a cement worker here and with his wife established a home.

There were four Aquilino boys. Charles, who is 32, stationed at Fort Ord, Calif. Tony, who is 23, is stationed at Hamilton Field, Calif. Joe, who is 31, works for the Potomac Electric Power Co. and takes care of joe, jr., who is all alone and not well enough to work. Mrs. Aquilino died June 9 of this year.

The one bright spot in Joe's life right now is the following letter which came recently from the Secretary of War:

"You will shortly receive the Purple Heart medal, which has been posthumously awarded by the direction of the President to your son, Corpl. Frank Aquilino, Engineers. It is sent as a tangible expression of the country's gratitude for his gallantry and devotion.

"It is sent to you, as well, with my personal sympathy for your bereavement. The loss of a loved one is beyond man's repairing and the medal is of slight value; not so, however, the message it carries. We are all comrades in arms in this battle for our country, and those who have gone are not, and never will be, forgotten by those of us who remain. I hope you will accept the medal in evidence of such remembrance. Sincerely yours,

HENRY L. STIMSON.

Lewis Reopens Wage, Hour Talks With Coal Operators

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes said yesterday President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers has resumed wage contract discussions with the northern Appalachian and Illinois coal operators.

Ickes said extension of the present work day from seven to eight hours was one of the topics under consideration. He explained he hesitated to use his newly acquired authority to extend the work-week by decree in the belief that institution of the longer work-week by collective bargaining might produce more coal.

Informed officials speculated an effort might be underway to settle the coal-wage controversy by a contract providing for a longer work day, leaving the question of "portal-to-portal" pay to the courts for settlement.

After having their portal-to-portal demands turned down by the War Labor Board twice, the miners filed suit in both Alabama and Tennessee District Courts for an adjustment. Previously, the Southern coal operators had filed suit in Virginia, asking for a declaratory judgment on the issue.

However, observers were puzzled by reports Lewis had returned to his original demand for a $2-a-day adjustment during the renewed conferences. Since he previously had agreed to accept a $1.25-a-day settlement, this was taken as an indication he was seeking for $2 for bargaining reasons by some observers.

More than one-fourth of the mines have been returned to their owners by Ickes, Government operator of the mines, with additional mines expected to be returned almost every day. Lewis previously had directed the miners to work until October 31 for the Government, but not for the mine owners. However, when the return of the mines began the miners were directed to continue working until further notice.

RAF Plane Makes 3150-Mile Flight

London, Sept. 9 (AP).—A Liberator of the RAF Transport Command made the first passenger flight from the United Kingdom to Bathurst, British West Africa, yesterday, covering the 3150 miles nonstop in 15 hours 58 minutes, the Air Ministry News Service announced tonight.

Passengers included Viscount Swinton, cabinet minister resident in British West Africa, and Colonial Minister Col. Oliver Stanley.

Two Restaurant Owners Face Revocation of Their Licenses

The District License Board yesterday recommended to the Commissioners that the licenses of two restaurant owners be revoked and that five other licenses be suspended for from two to three weeks after recent hearings on charges of flagrant violations of the sanitary code.

The two licenses which may be revoked were those of Louis Goodman, former owner of a restaurant at 935 Pennsylvania ave. nw., and Justine M. Cole, Negro, owner of a restaurant at 1418 Florida ave. ne.

Health inspectors testified at revocation hearings that over 100 pounds of decomposed meat were found in the Goodman restaurant and that there were other violations. Cole was accused of running an establishment in which rats and vermin were found, besides allowing "filthy conditions" to exist.

A three-week license suspension was recommended for a restaurant operated by Louis Charles and Constantine Mandes, beginning September 22.

Two-week suspensions were recommended for Charles E. Sanford, 62-64 H st. ne.; James C. Wing, 622 H st. nw.; Joseph S. George, 1540 7th st. nw., and Terry S. Gregory, 2632 14th st. nw. All suspensions would take place beginning September 22. Final decision lies with the District Commissioners.

The actions were the result of a recent cleanup campaign by the Health Department.

Meanwhile Albert Hughes, a restaurant operator at 27 H st. ne., was fined $15 for having dirty drinking utensils in his establishment, by Judge John P. McMahon in Municipal Court.

'A' Book Form Mailing Begun by OPA

OPA has begun mailing application forms to Washington motorists for renewal of basic "A" gasoline ration books.

District OPA officials urged yesterday that the forms be filled out carefully and returned to the board serving the area in which the car is kept, so new ration books may be issued before the expiration date of the old ones.

Under no circumstances will the new books be valid before the expiration date of the old, which has not been announced yet, OPA warned.

As last year, the forms are in two parts. The first part is for identification of the vehicle and the second part is the tire inspection record.

The car owner's name and address must be printed in a box in the lower, lefthand corner of the tire inspection record. The serial numbers of all tires, license number, State or registration, model and make of the auto must be included in both forms.

The back cover of the present ration book and the tire inspection record, showing at least one inspection and approval, must be mailed back with the forms. New books will be returned by mail.

It's up to every American to answer the call . . . in one way or another. Today, your Country is calling you just as surely as it called the legions who are fighting the good fight in so many strange lands.

When our boys go into action they don't ask where they're going. They know that some of them won't even come back!

But, you know where your money is going when it is invested in War Bonds! And, you know of a certainty that it will come back . . . with interest!

Episcopalians Send Retired Bishop Here

By Robert Tate Allen
Post Staff Writer

The Right Rev. George W. Davenport, retired Bishop of the Easton (Md.) Diocese, will have residence in the Washington Diocese from September 15 to December 15, it was learned yesterday.

He will make his headquarters at the Washington Diocesan House, 1702 Rhode Island ave. nw., and will be available for special confirmations and routine episcopal duties, except during the general convention of the Episcopal Church in Cleveland, October 2 to 11.

Before his retirement May 7, 1938, Bishop Davenport was for 18 years prelate of the Easton Diocese. He previously served parishes in Richmond Hill and Astoria, N. Y.; Danbury, Conn., and Burlington, Vt.

Meanwhile, the standing committee of the Washington Diocese, ruling body of the diocese since the death of Bishop James E. Freeman, has prepared a special prayer to be used throughout the diocese, for the guidance of those to whom is committed the task of choosing a new Bishop of Washington. The prayer follows:

"Almighty God, the giver of every good gift, look graciously, we beseech Thee, on Thy church; and so guide with Thy heavenly wisdom the minds of those to whom is committed the choice of a bishop for this diocese, that we may receive a faithful pastor who shall feed Thy flock according to Thy will; through Jesus Christ, Thine only Son, our Lord. Amen."

Henry E. Treide WMC Director For D. C. Region

Henry E. Treide of Baltimore, 58-year-old banker, has been named director of the War Manpower Commission, Region No. 4, which includes Washington, it was revealed yesterday.

He will succeed Leo Werts, assistant executive director of the WMC who has been acting as regional director since May.

Included in Region 4, in addition to Washington, are Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

The appointment of the new director was made public by Paul V. McNutt, WMC chairman.

Treide is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, with the class of 1903. Prior to engaging in the banking business he and his father were hosiery manufacturers and jobbers, in Baltimore.

Budapest String Quartet Opens New Concert Season in Capital

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Budapest String Quartet (Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Misha Schneider) on Thursday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet in E flat major, Op. 76, No. 6 (Haydn), Quartet No. 1, Op. 7 (Bartok), Quartet in A major, Op. 41, No. 3 (Schumann).

By Ray C. B. Brown

Summer concerts in their plenitude have abolished the old dividing line between musical seasons, but since the convention abides that autumn marks a fresh beginning, one can say the Budapest String Quartet opened the 1943-44 season last evening at the Library of Congress under sponsorship of the Gertrude Clarke Whitall Foundation. It was their first appearance since returning to their permanent base in Washington from a series of concerts in California, and it was good to hear again their finely balanced and artistically accented playing.

BROWN

Whether or not it was in celebration of their home-coming, they offered an engrossing novelty, Bela Bartok's Quartet No. 1, which one understands had not been performed here before. Actually, this work, composed in 1908, is not Bartok's first quartet, for he wrote one in 1899, but that remains in manuscript, along with a piano quartet, a violin sonata and a piano quintet. Those who have heard these early chamber music works say they are tinged with the influence of Brahms, and that may be the reason he has withheld them from publication.

Certainly there is no Brahmsian flavor in this soi-disant No. 1, even though it has a strong infusion of romanticism. If one looks for influences, they can be found in the chromaticism of Wagner and the introspection of Schoenberg. In fact, the quartet has much the same atmosphere as Schoenberg's "Verklaerte Nacht," though the resemblance goes no farther than that. The three movements are played without pause, so that the work has the unity of a single lyric inspiration. The music alternates between a brooding, somewhat eerie quietude and an impassioned intensity that is continuously interesting in rhythmic variety.

Those accustomed to Bartok's later style, his percussive, crisp and toccata-like effects, looked in vain for these mannerisms. The quartet is, one feels, a very personal work, surcharged with experienced emotions. Its poesy is sincere and cogent, its harmonies and themes are poignant, and its ardency is highly communicative.

The concert began with the E flat major quartet from Haydn's Opus 76, the most overworked set of this composer's foursomes, and closed with Schumann's A major quartet from the group of three that represent his first essay in chamber music. The quartets of Schumann do not quite come off as quartets, for they sound like lieder that have been scored for four instruments.

Funeral Services For J. S. Barbour Daingerfield

Mass for John S. Barbour Daingerfield, 68, who died Wednesday night at Garfield Hospital, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in St. Matthews Cathedral. Burial will be in New Cathedral Cemetery, Baltimore.

Mr. Daingerfield, who lived with his daughter, Mrs. S. Hutchins Still, at 1736 Columbia rd. nw., was an engineering draftsman in the sectional cartography division of the Geological Survey. He was a member of an old and prominent Virginia family.

A native of Alexandria, Va., he attended Georgetown University before entering the employ of the Geological Survey where he was a field man from 1900 to 1910. He then transferred to the Interior Department land grant office. He returned to the Geological Survey in 1935.

Besides Mrs. Still, Mr. Daingerfield is survived by Mrs. Alice R. Daingerfield; another daughter, Mrs. John A. Greenhalgh; a sister, Mrs. Carroll Rasin and two brothers, Henry Daingerfield and Philip Barton Key Daingerfield.

His mother was Mrs. Virginia Key Daingerfield, lineal descendant of Francis Scott Key.

B. M. Corrubia Dies

St. Louis, Sept. 9 (AP).—Angelo B. M. Corrubia, 62, founder and president of Scarab, national architectural fraternity, died today. A noted architect, Corrubia also was recognized as a landscape painter.

Extra-Fare System Called Unjustified

Transportation experts, subpenaed by the Army and Navy Departments, testified yesterday that bus companies offering transportation to Government facilities in the nearby Virginia area were not justified in charging extra fare or refusing transfer privileges.

J. L. Trueblood, civilian contact officer in the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, entered the proceedings as an expert witness for the Navy and testified that the extra fare was "not justified" for the Pentagon route.

The discussion is based on whether the military area immediately adjacent to the District should be included in a different transportation zone from the metropolitan zone or should be considered an added liability on the contributing bus companies.

J. E. Heberly, vice president and comptroller of the Capital Transit Company, was called to the witness stand by the Government. He testified that during the seven-month period ending July 31 the company's revenue in passenger remittances amounted to $179,524 and expenses amounted to $155,665.

This represented a total loss of $36,948 after deducting depreciation and taxes and allowing the normal 7 per cent rate of return, it was brought out in the testimony.

The first witness called on the stand yesterday was Merritt H. Taylor, president of the Philadelphia Suburban Transport Co., subpenaed by the War Department. His testimony indicated that bus company total revenues would not be reduced materially by a transfer system.

The hearings will continue until both Government and company witnesses are heard.

Horthy Reported Ousting Premier

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Brazzaville radio said today in a French language broadcast recorded by United States Government monitors that Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary, had dismissed Premier Nicholas von Kallay. "There probably will be an important announcement shortly by the government," said the station in French Equatorial Africa. Von Kallay had been Hungarian premier since March, 1942.

AGE 53

Come, my friends, let's listen to our Government, shower with bonds as much as possible, the more the better. That will make us friends with the enemy. Peace forever. That will save the people. Every minute counts. President Lincoln said, "A stitch in time saves nine, yet more in war."

Colonel Lewis' Funeral Rites Tomorrow

Military funeral services for Col. George Chase Lewis, USA, retired, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m., at Fort Myer Chapel. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Colonel Lewis, representing the sixth generation of his family to bear arms for the United States, died in his home at Mount Vernon, N. Y., on August 21, at the age of 67.

A native of Missouri, Colonel Lewis enlisted in the Army during the Spanish-American War, climbing the ranks from private to colonel in action during the Philippine and Mexican border campaigns and in the Third Division during the last World War.

He was graduated from the Army War College in 1928, and a year later, Colonel Lewis finished the field officers' course at the Chemical Warfare School. He was retired in 1940, but was recalled June 1, 1942, to serve as chairman of the Reclassification Board for Army Officers. From 1928 to 1935, Colonel Lewis was head of the military science department at New York City College.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Louis Manning Lewis, and two daughters, Misses Flora Louise and Virginia June Lewis, all of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Western Beet Men Choose Officers

Great Falls, Mont., Sept. 9 (AP).—Hugh Trowbridge of Comstock, Minn., was elected president of the Western Beet Growers Association yesterday.

Trowbridge succeeds Blaine Ferguson, Valier, Mont., who was made a vice president. Fred Sanborn, Great Falls, was reelected secretary-treasurer, and E. W. Rising, Nampa, Idaho, and Washington, D. C., again was named executive vice president.

Admiral Sexton, 67, Succumbs at Medical Center

Rear Admiral Walton Roswell Sexton died yesterday at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md. He would have been 67 years old Wednesday.

ADM. SEXTON

Chairman of the Navy General Board until last August and a board member until his death, Admiral Sexton served in the Navy in various outstanding capacities since he first entered the service at Annapolis in 1893. Admiral Sexton received the Navy Cross for distinguished service during the first World War.

In 1920, Admiral Sexton served as naval attache at the American Embassy at London, and after an assignment with the Pacific fleet, he was detailed to the Navy Department where he served in the Office of Naval Operations. In 1925, he commanded the USS Utah, and later returned for two years to the Office of Naval Operations. In June, 1931, he was appointed assistant to the chief of naval operations.

He assumed the command of battleships, Battle Force, on July 1, 1933. Chairman of the Navy Department's general board since 1939, Admiral Sexton remained at his post at the personal request of President Roosevelt when he was retired from active service on October 1, 1940.

When Secretary Knox learned of Admiral Sexton's death yesterday morning, he issued a statement extolling the "brilliant, conscientious" way in which he had discharged his duties.

Admiral Sexton was born in Monmouth, Ill., which is also given as his residence. His next of kin is listed by the Navy as Mrs. F. E. Fleck, a cousin, of Rosemont, Pa.

Safeway Charges Discrimination in Suit Against OPA

Safeway Stores, Inc., operators of 2300 grocery stores throughout the country, in a suit filed yesterday in the United States Emergency Court of Appeals charged the Office of Price Administration is discriminating against the firm in the sale of potatoes and onions.

Safeway says wholesalers and middlemen under the regulations are allowed to mark up prices on the articles up to 60 cents on a 100 pounds of potatoes and 40 cents on 50 pounds of onions. Safeway, however, is not allowed the mark-up, according to the suit.

OPA is guilty of an "arbitrary discrimination" on Safeway and on its customers because of the scarcity in the produce market, the suit states.

Short-Term Food Needs Take Precedence Over Long-Range Plans in United Nations Scheme, Pearson Says

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Long-range food aims of the United Nations, as expressed at the Hot Springs Conference, will give way to short-term needs during the immediate postwar years—should there be a conflict between the two—L. B. Pearson, chairman of the Interim Commission on Food and Agriculture, declared yesterday.

Countries which have "just been through a war," for instance, will not be advised to provide a pint of milk a day" for each child by 1950" but will told how to maximize their total food production in a short period of time, he said.

"Great quantities of energy foods are needed now and must be provided, although the ultimate aim is toward the production of more protective foods," Pearson said.

The permanent United Nations Food Commission—to be organized by December 1 of this year—will not "be quite as ambitious" in its planning as the Hot Springs delegates were, Pearson indicated, but will content itself with the "practical approach to the immediate problem." He expressed doubt it would endeavor to discuss international security or full-time world employment, both Hot Springs objectives.

"But I am sure we hope other bodies will be discussing these and that there will be some big overall body into which we all fit," he said.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ONE of the last things Big Bill Jeffers did before announcing his resignation as rubber administrator was to sit as arbiter in a hot and very important session between rubber workers and rubber manufacturers over the question of constructing more tire factories.

The Big Four rubber companies (Goodyear, Firestone, Goodrich and U. S. Rubber) had drawn up elaborate plans for new tire factories in new locations, chiefly in Texas and the South. Apparently they wanted to break away from Akron. The United Rubber Workers, worried over maintaining union membership in the South, was much opposed.

So Jeffers listened to both sides of the story.

United Rubber Workers President S. H. Dalrymple came loaded with facts and figures. He said the rubber companies had tons of tire-making equipment stored away. All they had to do was wipe off the dust, not to build new plants, using scarce strategic materials

Spokesmen for the rubber companies admitted they had a lot of tire equipment but claimed it was not enough to manufacture 30 million passenger tires needed for 1944.

Jeffers Stomps

JEFFERS LISTENED attentively, then swung his weight vigorously on the side of labor. He put his foot down categorically on the industry's expansion program in the South.

"Some plants will have to be expanded," he said, "but do it in existing locations. Furthermore, some of your plants now doing war work will be converted back again.

"Take Kelly-Springfield in Cumberland (Maryland)." Jeffers continued. "They converted to an ammunition plant and set aside a lot of their tire-making equipment. But Ordnance has now abandoned the plant, and it can get back to production of tires. The same thing is happening at the United States Rubber plant at Eau Claire, Wis."

Incidentally, Jeffers was irked because the rubber companies sent their third-string men, instead of top executives. He felt strongly that for such an important meeting the industry should be represented by such men as Harvey Firestone, Jr., or J. W. Thomas, president of Firestone, or P. W. Litchfield, president of Goodyear. But they were absent.

With a scowl at the industry's representatives, Jeffers made a crack against the practice of driving workers hard by something like the infamous Bedaux methods.

"What you fellows need," said Jeffers, "is less stopwatch and more common sense."

Warns Labor

THEN HE SHOOK a warning finger at Rubber Workers' Dalrymple. "But you fellows have got to do your stuff if we are going to produce these 30,000,000 tires next year. You have got to pull strong in the harness."

Before the meeting was over industry representatives had agreed to abandon their pretentious program for expansion. All of the Big Four had big programs, one company planning an expansion of 100 per cent. Jeffers told them to go back, recheck their figures and return with a reasonable program.

Labor leaders went away delighted. After the meeting Jeffers leaned back in his swivel chair.

"I haven't dealt with rubber workers much before," he said, "but I have dealt with railroad workers, and they are all the same. I think the boys are going to do their stuff."

FDR's Dilemma

SOME OF the turmoil regarding Sumner Welles and the appointment of a new Undersecretary of State can now be explained by the following events inside the White House.

When Secretary Hull stayed behind after a Cabinet meeting in mid-August and lengthily told the President that either he or Welles must go, the President immediately sent for Welles and broke the news. This, he said, was one of the toughest things he had had to do in his entire life. But he urged that Welles go to Russia with Anthony Eden to do some long-needed patching up with Molotoff and Stalin.

Welles, terribly upset by this abrupt dismissal, was unable to give the President a definite answer. He resigned immediately, but was inclined to feel that anything he did in Russia would be undercut by Secretary Hull, partly because of Hull's dislike of Welles, partly because of his lack of enthusiasm for Russia.

Secretary Hull, however, assured the President he would be delighted to have his former Undersecretary of State undertake the Russian mission.

Hull Changes Mind

All this occurred before word leaked out that Welles was being ousted. Since that leak, with its accompanying press reaction, Mr. Hull has changed his mind. He has felt more bitter than ever toward his former Undersecretary and is upset over the severe criticism hurled at the State Department by James LeCron and by editorial comment.

More recently, therefore, Hull has indicated that he, not Welles, is the one to confer with Foreign Ministers Eden and Molotov.

That is the dilemma in which the President finds himself.

Personally the President has felt that the younger, more vigorous Welles rather than 72-year-old Hull was the man to send on a difficult mission of this kind, which may entail several thousand miles of air travel. That is the reason for the significant silence regarding Welles' resignation and his successor.

$50,000 Allotted Md. Minute Men

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 9 (AP).—Governor O'Conor announced today the appropriation of $50,000 from the war emergency fund for ammunition and equipment for the Maryland Minute Men.

O'Conor said that the sum made available to the Minute Men would be used in a manner determined by the commanding officers of the State military department after they had consulted with battalion commanders and superior officers of the Minute Men units throughout the State.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

BIG MONEY. The most expensive night club talent in the United States (and that means the world, too) will be flaunting its stuff in Washington. Hildegarde is costing the Statler $2100 a week. And when Joe E. Lewis, the king of 'em all, comes to the Troika next week, he'll also take more than $2000 a week from that nitery's till. The Troika's getting used to monumental salaries, though—they've been coughing up for the expensive Duncan Sisters for the last two months. P. S. Topsy and Eva are leaving some of their money in Washington. Last week they bought the old mill on the Radford estate up near Fairfax, are going to make it into a studio.

The brilliant opening of the new Olmsted's Club last night was a cross section of New Deal figures, diplomats, society, entertainers snatching a few minutes from their own spots or shows to listen to Nancy Noland. Lynn Allison ringsided at Olmsted's every minute when she wasn't singing at the Capitol Theater.

CHARLIE MCCARTHY'S GRANDPA is cutting up at the Casino Royal. Meaning the Great Lester, handsome oldster, who taught ventriloquism to Edgar Bergen. That surely makes him Charlie's grandpa. Lester tosses his voice around with rare skill while smoking and sipping wine, exchanges explosive 1943 wisecracks with his not-so-dumb dummy.

NEW TRICKS will be in order when Paul Young's opens on September 21. Instead of two floor shows a night, the evening will be one long show, with acts presented at every dance intermission. There'll be a new Sydney Orchestra, too, directed by Felix Zimmer, ace pianist and accordionist.

The Parrot is to be done over at a cost of around $15,000. Motif will be Early American, except for a cocktail lounge to be called the Parrakeet Room.

LOVELY LISTENING. Rollini's dalliance with "Loch Lomond" at El Patio. His approximation of Scotch bagpipes on the vibraphone comes under the head of minor miracles . . . The pretty mischief injected into "Everything I've Got Belongs to You," by Loraine Daly, sweety-pie singer with Eddy Rogers' Band at Del Rio . . . Hi Hat's Peggy Leonard pours her heart right out in "Russian Lullaby" . . . Donnelly James of the Dubonnet Room goes rural in a rollicking version of "Josephine" . . . Black-eyed Kay Arden of the Neptune Room turns out melody with the speed of a war machine spouting rivets—except that Kay's music is the opposite of mechanized. She gives a different touch to a tune every time she plays it . . . Mellow is the word for Les Williams' bass solos at the Old New Orleans. Listen for his version of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" . . . Harold Nagel's Orchestra at the Carlton has the loveliest arrangement of "Show Boat" tunes you'll ever hear. Each melody is accented on one instrument with a softly blended background.

THE LOUISIANA, colorful Georgetown nitery, will reopen on September 17 with Ray King's music. Despite the draft Maestro King still has that big 13-piece band that drew dancers to the Louisiana last year.

Dirty Gerty From Bizerte" will soon be heard in the uppity Lounge Riviera. Jimmy Bright, now in uniform, is sending a copy to his old boss, Maestro Pete Macias.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys are in need of attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Work, Fight Law Heading Toward Battle

By Lin Celdon
Post Staff Writer

Developments in the "work-or-fight" law dispute in Maryland, that originated in Montgomery County, and which has reached State-wide proportions, last night were:

1—Wicomico County inaugurates enforcement campaign; stops sale of liquors to non-Marylanders and those without draft and ration cards.

2—Queen Anne County State's attorney and Trial Magistrate hold "diametrically" opposite opinions.

3—Harford County sheriff says "informers are ready to inform against others, but not to face those they accuse."

Girded for Fight

Those favoring the law, under which Montgomery County sentenced the 19-year-old 4-F Army reject Stanley Day to 30 days on the road gang in lieu of a $50 fine, only to release him within 24 hours after The Post told the story exclusively, and two other factions, those who think little of the law and those who are undecided last night girded themselves for what may become a major fight in the Maryland legislature this fall as a result of the drive inaugurated yesterday in Wicomico County in which eight men were jailed for investigation early in the day in what officials called a "drive for enforcement."

The men were held in custody by Police Chief William Chatham. Officers were stationed in the county liquor dispensary to check on compliance with the "work or fight" statute and with the county liquor control board's order that liquor sales be confined only to Marylanders. The order became effective yesterday.

Liquor Sales Drop

Chatham said liquor sales at the dispensary dropped off sharply as the word spread that prospective customers were required to present draft or ration cards for identification before making purchases. The police chief said that persons "suspected" of violation of the "work or fight" law would be held for action by State's Attorney Rex A. Taylor.

In Queen Annes County there was a major difference of opinion over the law among enforcement agents. State's Attorney Harry C. Butler and County Magistrate Joseph Holden expressed diametrically opposed opinions on the law. Butler said he has handled "about 30 cases" under the law. He said he had no trouble in enforcement of the measure. Holden said the law was not specific or strong enough in that it did not clearly define "gainful occupation." The law says a man, between 16 and 60, must work at a gainful occupation at least five days a wek.

Meanwhile the Maryland American Federation of Labor, convinced, according to Joseph Gillis, State organizer, that the law carries potential antilabor qualities, will meet Wednesday night with Robert J. Buxbaum, federation president and legislative agent, to discuss possible action.

"A Vagrancy Law"

The meeting will be held in Baltimore. Labor papers throughout the State have already begun an expose of the story of how the law was passed by the Maryland Legislature as a "patriotic measure" under the title of "Work or Fight" when the act itself, according to State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr. of Montgomery County, says nothing about "work or fight." There is no choice. Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, who sentenced, and subsequently released young Day, termed the law a "sort of vagrancy law."

Sheriff Charles Stephens of Harford County yesterday reported some difficulty in enforcement of the law. "Informers," he said, "are ready to inform against others, but not ready to face those they accuse."

In Cecil County State's Attorney Henry L. Constable said "we've had one complaint which did not develop."

40 Are Warned

A survey of others of the counties in which the "State" law applies only brought varied comment from officials. They were:

Talbot: As many as 40 warned about the law in one day but no cases reached the courts, said State's Attorney William Reddie.

Caroline: The law has worked out "fairly well without prosecutions," according to State's Attorney Layman J. Redden. Cases reported by citizens and the Farm Labor Office were warned, but Redden said he considered "against arrests."

St. Marys: State's Attorney C. Henry Pamalier has had no cases although he thought the law a "good one."

Evicted Family of Seven Succeeds in Hunt for Home

A frantic day-long search for a home ended happily last night when the Newberry family, evicted because their landlady had only one bathroom, found a dwelling at 4628 Hilltop Terrace se.

For the past 2½ years Mr. and Mrs. Newberry and their five children have been living in the first floor three-room apartment of a rooming house at 468 K st. nw. Housed in the two upper stories and the basement were nine other tenants. The building had only one bathroom and the District Health Department, which permits but 10 people to a bath, ordered the landlady, Mrs. Maude May, 820 6th st. nw., to reduce the number of tenants.

Unable to find a place to move, the Newberrys stayed. Faced with the loss of her license, Mrs. May procured a court order and yesterday the Newberry household furnishings were moved out on the street.

There they remained until nightfall, when Newberry who drives a cab, found a house and borrowed enough money to move the family's belongings.

McLaughlin Estate To Church, Daughters

The will of James McLaughlin of Rockville, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans Court at Rockville, bequeaths $200 to St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville, for masses and leaves the residue in equal shares to the testator's four daughters—Mae, Anna and Helen McLaughlin and Mrs. Katherine Schropp. Miss Mae McLaughlin and the testator's son-in-law, Howard Schropp, are named excutors. The will, which was executed June 28, 1934, does not reveal the value of the estate.

IT IS ONLY DAWN IN ITALY...

Yet in this dawn there is the promise that all the fears and troubled dreams, the terrors of the years of night and slavery are giving way to the coming light of victory.

The hope of peace at last is passing from man to man, from land to conquered land across the world.

In France, men lift their heads and shake the shrug of resignation from their shoulders; in Holland, Belgium, Poland, Norway and the Balkans, in China, the Indies and the Philippines, there grows the certainty that, as surely as the sun rises, as surely as rivers flow to the sea, men and the children of men may soon be free.

Here in America, we see in Italy the first rewards of all our sacrifice and sweat and pain. But, Italy is only the dawn—and we are quick to recognize that now is the time to drive on with quickened pace, working, building, forging ahead, to hasten final victory, the coming of a further dawn—when soldiers coming home, and men and women who have kept that home, will build together an even greater America on the sound foundations of the old.

An America where nothing will stifle men's ambitions or their will to dare. An America where there will be useful work for all—and for all, equality of opportunity and the right of men to make the most of their ability...

An America—and a world—where there will be the freedom we're fighting for ... the freedom of each individual to speak, to worship, to work, to live, to be useful to himself and to his fellow men.

But it is only dawn in Italy, and lest this dawn prove false ... we must drive on! Work now with all our strength! Fight harder than we have fought before... in factories, homes and in the field of war!

Closed-Shop Court

When Congress set up the new Municipal Court for the District not so long ago it provided that not more than two judges of that tribunal might be nonresident lawyers practicing in the local courts. This was obviously a gesture of good will to the many attorneys who have their offices in the District but live on the other side of the line. In quite the opposite spirit, the Frederick-Montgomery Circuit Court has virtually excluded from practice in that court attorneys who live in the area of its jurisdiction but have their offices in the District. In other words, a lawyer heretofore serving both the District and Montgomery County may now become a judge on this side of the line but is forbidden even to practice on the other side, without the aid of an associate who maintains an office there.

If Montgomery County thus builds a wall around legal practice in the county, as pointed out by H. Winship Wheatley, past president of the District Bar Association, other communities will be encouraged to do likewise. That is an absurd sort of competition for any legislature or court to start. It puts an agency of justice into the position of trying to create a tight little monopoly, as selfish corporations and some labor unions are wont to do. Somehow it seems particularly inept for a court on the periphery of the Nation's Capital to adopt such a narrow policy. We hope that the attorneys thus discriminated against will not let the matter rest until the rule has been changed by either court action or revision of the law which made it possible.

Keep 'Em Flying

The exploits in this war which make the pulses tingle fastest are those of our airmen. Dauntless knights of the sky, they are writing heroic chapters of history which will never be forgotten. However, for the work that remains to be done there are still too few of these winged adventurers. A call to join them, to be one of a gallant band who forever will be joined together in a close fraternity, appeared yesterday in an advertisement in this newspaper. Too few inductees of the right age and with proper qualifications know that they may register their choice and join the Army Air Corps. They simply go where they are told. With the Air Corps part of the Army, the probability is that the inductee is put in the ground forces before he realizes what has happened. Even then, however, he has a chance to make a bid for service in the air through his commanding officer, if he only knew it. This advertisement is a reminder of these opportunities. The Nation at large has an interest in seeing that this reminder is given to the youth of America, under as well as over 18. For it is now recognized that our main effort is in the air. And crews are even more important than bombers, though those crews have not been forthcoming as fast as the bombers. This is only because of the hodgepodge character of the recruiting program, which has not brought in enough candidates precisely because there is no separate air force which can furnish the organization for recruitment. It is a drag on the war effort that we have been negligent in this matter. Worse, it is unfair to the bomber crews who already are overworked in the great air campaign over Germany.

Lae And Salamaua

The Japanese have other bases on New Guinea besides Lae and Salamaua. There is Finschhafen to the east; Madang, 150 miles to the northwest, Wewak and other points on the northern coast of that large island. But Finschhafen will become untenable once Lae and Salamaua are taken by the Allies. And since a drive on Lae and Salamaua could not be launched from Madang or Wewak or the other Japanese-held points, the fact that they will continue to remain in enemy hands will make no difference so far as Allied plans are concerned, provided we take Lae and Salamaua.

That goal, happily, is now in process of achievement. General MacArthur's brilliant move in landing a large force on Huon Gulf east of Lae has cut off the Japanese garrison from their supply and reinforcement base at Finschhafen. In the meantime Allied troops are getting ready to storm Salamaua. So the completion of another stage in the campaign against Rabaul is in the offing. From eastern New Guinea the western coast of New Britain will be wide open to Allied amphibious operations, while from our advanced air bases the port and airfields of Rabaul can be given a constant pounding. The outlook in the southwest Pacific is good.

Haggling With Friends

The sudden reversal of the President's position on the settlement of lend-lease obligations is bound to cause a good deal of consternation at home and abroad. In the letter of transmittal published with the eleventh lend-lease report, Mr. Roosevelt said: "The Congress in passing and extending the Lend-Lease Act made it plain that the United States wants no new war debts to jeopardize the coming peace. Victory and a secure peace are the only coin in which we can be repaid." On Tuesday, however, at his press conference the President explained that these two sentences had been included by mistake and would not appear in the letter actually to be submitted to Congress.

How such an error came to be committed remains something of a mystery. But the error itself, though somewhat shocking, is of less importance than the attitude disclosed by the correction. In its editorial comment on the published letter, The Post cited these particular sentences with warm approbation and observed: "This is merely a restatement of what he and others have said on this subject in the past. It is useful, however, to have it restated at this time. The point should be understood by the whole American public. For any misunderstanding on this score can seriously undermine our chances of fashioning an intelligent, workable economic settlement when the war is ended." We were by no means alone in this view. A survey of leading newspapers throughout the country shows that nearly all of those that commented on this facet of the report did so with approval.

By retracting the two sentences, President Roosevelt has certainly contributed nothing to popular understanding of the lend-lease concept as he himself has elsewhere expounded and defined it. On the contrary, he has encouraged the public to think of lend-lease as a debt in the ordinary sense of that word. But the plain fact is that the treatment of lend-lease as a debt would seriously "jeopardize the coming peace." Our allies will simply be unable to repay us in gold. And it would be economically ruinous for us to accept repayment in goods.

The President knows this well and has pointed it out himself in the past. We can only assume, then, that he has chosen to retain the consideration of lend-lease as a form of indebtedness in order to employ it as a bargaining point in postwar negotiations with our allies. Perhaps he intends, at some future conference table, to release our allies from this indebtedness—which cannot be met, anyhow—in order to wrest from them concessions in some other spheres. We doubt that any of our allies will be so naive as to be moved by such tactics. Moreover, there is no need of them. We shall have immense bargaining power at the war's end. For all of our allies will need our goods, our machines and our credit to rehabilitate lands which have experienced the direct fury of the war.

Bargaining of this sort would, in any case, make a sorry travesty of the spirit in which we embarked upon the lend-lease program and of the whole United Nations ideal. The strict application of a quid pro quo formula in the past has not wrought such international harmony as to warrant its perpetuation. We shall do a great deal better, perhaps, in our approach to postwar problems by substituting for it the kind of wholehearted cooperativeness which has moved us so swiftly toward victory.

There is another passage in the President's lend-lease letter of transmittal which, happily, he has not deleted. "The United Nations," he said, "are growing stronger because each of them is contributing to the common struggle in full measure—whether in men, in weapons, or in materials. Each is contributing in accordance with its ability and its resources. Everything that all of us have is dedicated to victory over the Axis powers." In such a partnership there is no room for debits or credits or for the shrewd practices of international horse-trading. We seek a victory commensurate with the magnitude of the cause in which we have engaged. We shall gain it not by being sharp but by being generous.

Featherbedding

The train tragedies reinforce the warning of the Office of Defense Transportation of a crisis in railroad manpower unless steps are immediately taken to forestall it. Director Eastman appeals to management and labor to join with Government representatives in working out a relief program. Among other proposals he urged agreements between the railroads and Selective Service to provide for the retention as long as possible of essential employes subject to the draft. The program also calls for organized recruiting drives by railway managements, with the help of the WMC and the Railroad Retirement Board; recruitment of more women; creation by the railways of special pools of train, engine, yard, shopcraft and other skilled employes, for utilization wherever needed in emergencies, and use of Mexicans and prisoners of war for certain kinds of work. Especial stress is laid upon the need for labor-management cooperative committees to improve service and conserve manpower. Last but by no means least, Director Eastman recommends suspension under certain conditions of the operation of so-called "full-crew" laws and of train and engine mileage limitations that result in under-utilization of employes.

In other words, Mr. Eastman is suggesting abandonment of various make-work practices that are responsible for an inexcusable wastage of railway manpower. Although Director Eastman says that "much has been accomplished in removing mileage limitations," he adds that "substantial numbers of train and engine service men are not yet working the number of hours which can be reasonably considered to be full time under present conditions." Notice is served, therefore, that in the event railway managements and employes are unable to agree upon removal of mileage limitations that are unduly wasteful of manpower the ODT will take counsel with the ICC as to the "desirability of mandatory action." The ODT communication leaves no doubt that strong measures will be taken to avert the calamity of a possible breakdown of transportation services if its suggestions are not tested or if they fail in practice to solve the railroads' manpower problem. In that event it promises to "do what it can to promote further legislation by Congress." Presumably that means that Director Eastman will press for passage of a compulsory service law applicable to the railroads.

Fight For Italy

Although the Italian government has surrendered unconditionally to the Allies, the struggle for the strategic control of the Italian Peninsula is far from over. This is shown in the report that a powerful Anglo-American force under the command of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark landed in the Naples area early Thursday morning and encountered strong resistance from Nazi troops. It is evident that the Germans have no intention of voluntarily relinquishing Italy to the Allies. They realize that the consequences of a complete Allied occupation of that country would add greatly to the already grave perils confronting the Reich.

The greatest of these perils is that the Allies will acquire air bases in northern Italy from which refugee war industries in Austria, Czechoslovakia and east Germany could be pounded to bits. To postpone such a development as long as possible—it is questionable if it can be averted indefinitely—the German high command appears ready to risk the loss of many men and much materiel in a delaying action in central and southern Italy. Germany also faces the further possibility (already a reality in some parts of Italy) that, in addition to fighting the Allies, the German troops located on the peninsula will also have to fight the Italians.

In this connection the role which the Italian people may play in this latest phase of the war may prove of very great importance. The isolated detachments of German troops strung along the spine of Italy cannot be supplied by sea, since Germans lack the shipping and the naval power necessary for that job. For them to be supplied overland means the willing or unwilling cooperation of Italian workers. If that cooperation is withheld, these detachments will be starved out, and thus will face speedy extermination. There is every reason to believe that such cooperation will be withheld.

In the meantime, Hitler in his despair has allowed himself the irritating and futile gesture of establishing on German soil an Italian Fascist government-in-exile. Unlike the Allied governments-in-exile now making their seat in London, Cairo and elsewhere, this German-sponsored regime represents nobody but the Nazis and a few disgruntled supporters of Mussolini. Fearful of what was in store for them, these Italians have sought refuge in the Reich. There is nothing Italian about it, except its name, and it is unlikely to have the slightest effect on the course of events in the kingdom. But it is a further reflection of the importance the Germans attach to keeping Italy, even nominally, in the war and the lengths to which Hitler will go to restore the status quo that was shattered by the Italian government's surrender.

Over-Optimism

By Mark Sullivan

Hard Fighting Ahead

ABOUT THE length and intensity of the war from now on, there is a view which reflects the best possible judgment. When President Roosevelt and other high authorities warn against overoptimism following the surrender of Italy, they are not merely trying to counteract a popular enthusiasm which is natural under the circumstances. Judgment that is coldly military and based on access to all the facts is that the really hard part of the war is ahead. Even as respects Germany, this judgment places the end of the fighting at least a year ahead, and as respects Japan, somewhat more.

As respects Germany, the judgment is that she will not confine herself to merely a stubborn defensive. She will be in a ring, but it is a very large ring, impossible for the Allies to make tight at every point. Germany has the military force, and the will, to lunge outward at one point after another, and the lunges can result in very bloody fighting. The German leaders still have faith, and can lead the German people to have faith, in the power of her submarines to embarrass the shipping necessary to supply large American and British forces on the continent of Europe. The submarine is not regarded by our own high command as by any means fully overcome. Gradual tightening of the ring around Germany will facilitate Allied air attacks on points within that country. Allied superiority in the air is great, and grows constantly. But military judgment does not believe that air superiority alone can win the war.

COLD MILITARY judgment compares our present superiority in the air with the superiority Germany had in the beginning of the war. In the summer of 1940 Germany had enormous air superiority over England, the only country then fighting her. Yet Germany was not able to conquer England. While England had only slight air power relatively, it was built for defense, and her defensive types of planes were of high quality. These defense planes, skillfully manned and maneuvered, and carefully conserved, were able to save England against various and continued assaults by Germany's great force of attack planes. This lesson is now being used by Germany. She is accepting the reversal of positions, putting herself in the position that England had in 1940. Adopting this strategy, Germany is concentrating her new construction on planes of the defense type. She may be able to make herself as effective defensively, as respects air power, as England proved to be in the fall of 1940.

As respects Japan, there are conditions that point in opposite directions. When Japan abandoned the Aleutian Island of Kiska without defense, one school of thought said this marked a change in Japan's psychology—that she no longer had her early confidence and aggressiveness of morale. Another school of thought believed the withdrawal from Kiska was according to plan, in the genuine sense. It believed that Japan had originally occupied the island, in the summer of 1942, for a limited purpose—in order to divert part of the American strength and for other strategic objectives valuable at that time but no longer important. There are signs that other moves of Japan, sometimes interpreted as showing weakness, are merely an adjustment of her forces to meet conditions which are now new but must have been anticipated by Japan. It is fairly clear that Japan is preparing for the expected move against her by way of Burma and China.

IT IS plain that Japan's merchant fleet, and to a less but marked degree her naval fleet, has been seriously reduced. In her situation, calling for much water transportation from island to island, this is a material setback.

From the beginning a basic speculation about Japan dwelt upon what success she would have in adding to her strength by making use of the resources she early acquired, including large acquisitions of population. A recent and well informed judgment is that she has been able to organize much of the population of conquered territories into strength for making supplies and building defensive positions, though not for military personnel.

All these present signs that the remainder of the war will be hard are subordinate to fundamental conditions that make for certainty of victory. The early plan of the Axis was that Germany, moving eastward across the Mediterranean, and Japan westward through India, should join hands, making a belt that would separate the Allies—with Russia on one side of the belt, Britain and the United States on the other. That, and only that, would have brought the world conquest the Axis hoped for.

It is now made impossible by Allied control of the Mediterranean. And continued Allied control of the Mediterranean is assured by the surrender of Italy.

Air Power

By Paul Schubert

Yardstick Of Military Strength

WHAT IS the outstanding fact about the German retreats of 1943—in North Africa, in Sicily, in Italy, in Russia? In every case, the attacking armies which forced these retreats had marked air superiority.

In every case this air superiority was won in combat. At first it was tough combat, with the equation of battle fairly even. As time went on, however, the Germans proved unable to replace their losses, much less build up superior air strength . . . Presently our side had a clear edge, and after that the curve of our air superiority went up swiftly. By the time the big land push began, we dominated the air quite one-sidedly. This made it possible for our strategic and tactical air forces to deal the enemy crushing blows.

However bravely the German ground troops resisted the attack—and they fought hard on Sicily, in Tunisia at Orel, and Kharkov—victory went to the side with air superiority, as it has throughout this war.

IN FACT, the great lesson of this war is the modern military axiom that air power is the key to advance on the surface. All the German blitz campaigns illustrated this point. So did Japan's Asiatic blitz. By reversing the air power equation we have reversed the direction of movement in the Pacific theater—and the advance from Alamein to Calabria is fresh evidence of the new doctrine's soundness. In Russia, too, the ability of the Russian armies to push the Germans westward, adds to the accumulation of experience as to air power's key importance.

How is it possible that the Germans, who are specialists in ground warfare, allowed themselves to be thrust into the position of air inferiority?

Germany's 1943 weakness in air power over the ground combat fronts, was caused by the withdrawal of the Luftwaffe.

Germany's air force has been pulled back to defend the German production plant from the long-range strategic air attack of the Royal Air Force and the U. S. Army Air Force.

Surely a Germany which deliberately undertook an aggressive adventure as great as this war of conquest, must have realized the need to be able to fight simultaneous successful air warfare, both over the ground combat fronts, and over the production front?

Surely Germany must have realized that both tactical and strategic air power must be equally capable of successful offensive and successful defensive warfare, if they are to warrant the term "air power"?

TO UNDERSTAND the reason for the German reversal, let us examine (1) the German conception of air warfare, and (2) the German aircraft-production situation.

As for the German conception of air warfare, it seems increasingly clear that the Germans have never really understood or properly evaluated strategic air power. Germany's greatest successes in air warfare have been in the support of ground operations, through tactical air power and air transport. In the case of surface operations at sea, even tactical air power was neglected—fatally so. The only extensive German venture into strategic air warfare—the bomb blitz on England—was quite inadequate in conception, and abruptly abandoned in the face of stubborn British resistance.

Even while Germany seemed to be winning campaigns in 1939 and 1940 through the use of "air power," it was the inept use being made of German air power that taught Britain's leaders that Germany's weakness lay in the air—the one real hope of defeating Germany was to defeat the Luftwaffe . . . and the Luftwaffe could be defeated.

Germany might, of course, have learned the lesson of German air weakness, too, and might have set out to overcome that weakness.

But to overcome air weakness, it is necessary to build planes, and build them on a very large scale. The United States will build up close to 100,000 planes this year—and before many years that figure will seem puny.

If Germany hoped, after 1942, to get back "in the war," German aircraft production during 1943 must have been 75,000 planes at the very minimum, 100,000 planes by preference.

Let's assume that Germany is trying to turn these planes out. But we are determined not to let them be produced, and all year our strategic air power has been hammering at the German air production plant. Result: the Luftwaffe has been pulled back from the combat fronts to try to stop us.

This merely proves that the war's most critical front is now the long-range air bombardment front, for apart from everything else, it is our success on this front that makes it possible for us to gain ground so fast on the surface-combat fronts.

Population Problem

I note that Guy Irving Burch, long-time protagonist of birth control, suggests in his statement on "Limiting Population" in The Post, that the "mumbo jumbo of diplomats and moralists" be made to give way to the brute force of statism—which we thought we were fighting to rid the world of—to bring about a satisfactory world population situation. As he put it: "Countries of the world will have to voluntarily limit their populations or be forced to do so by international society." To anyone who knows the work of Guy Burch and his kind over the past years, there can be only one meaning behind his words: Now that the Western World, through its habits of uncontrol, is on the slopes of suicide, this world must see to it that the Eastern World commits suicide too.

Instead of worrying about the Eastern World, it is high time that Mr. Burch is beginning to worry about the incredible damage the doctrine he has long preached has done to the Western World. Let me give a few quotations from leaders and scholars and a few population facts that are to the point here. If Mr. Burch should care to close his mind to their obvious implications, I feel certain the readers of your publication will not be so inclined.

Says Giraud, of France—a country certainly not "prostrate with overpopulation": "What are the causes of this unforseeable crash, unheard of in the history of France? First, the primordial question, that of birth rate. France, even without the war, was on the slope of suicide."

And Winston Churchill: "One of the most somber anxieties which beset those who look 30 or 40 or 50 years ahead . . . is a dwindling birth rate in 30 years . . . If this country is to keep its high place in the leadership of the world, and to survive as a great power that can hold its own against external pressure, our people must be encouraged by every means to have large families." Dr. F. McGuchin, speaking of the same threat, stated that "eventually this decline might cause the disruption of the British Empire, neither Britain nor Australia having the men to man the walls against the yellow races."

The threat of decline in our own case is hardly less foreboding. Our larger cities are failing by practically a third to reproduce themselves. Wrote Roger W. Babson recently, referring to our declining birth rate: "This tendency must be stopped or America will some day be conquered by some other race."

To quote an editor, Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution: "It is obvious that under cover of this war of machines there is going on a war of superiority in population between the East and the West, with the East easily the victor. And he who does not think this steady population growth will have a tremendous and overpowering hand in the world that is to follow this war is so very wrong there is no need even to argue that he is wrong."

And finally, a line from one of these mere "mumbo jumbo" individuals, Ethicist Dr. Thomas Hanley: "No wealthy nation has ever been allowed by its less prosperous neighbors to die out slowly and peacefully in the enjoyment of a high standard of living."

Magna Carta

In your editorial on "Habeas Corpus," you repeat an old error to the effect that this writ was referred to in Magna Carta. (I believe this is the preferable spelling.) Holdworth ("History of English Law," Vol II, 207-216; see also his "Lessons From Our Legal History") says, in effect, that the constitutional clauses—ms. 38, 39 and 40—have been variously construed. Coke, in the eighteenth century, said that the Habeas Corpus Act was embodied in them, and Blackstone, in the eighteenth century, said that they embodied principles of trial by jury. Holdsworth's comment is that habeas corpus was not invented in 1215, and judicium parium was not trial by jury. However, these clauses do embody a protest against arbitrary arrest, and do assert a regard for a free trial. Magna Carta was an attempt in the language of the thirteenth century to realize these ideals.

Drafting Fathers

In view of the recent suggestion offered by the Manpower and Selective Service officials, that it may be necessary to draft fathers by October 1, approximately, I believe that prior to the induction of fathers, our representation in Congress should insist on a thorough and sincere investigation of Government employes or attaches, to determine what percentage is eligible for the draft, and then consider the induction of fathers, if it is decided that an Army of a specified number is essential and advantageous.

The Once Over

Our Own Radio Domestic Mediation Board

Q. Now we come to Case 877. Will you tell the board about your problem?

A. Well, I've been keeping company with a man for 32 years. I find I am becoming rather fond of him and I think we should be married.

Q. You think 32 years is too long for a courtship?

A. Yes. Maybe I'm being unreasonable, but I'm the impatient type.

* * * *

Q. What does the man say?

A. Every night he just comes home, reads the newspaper, finds fault with everything. He shows no interest in me or the children.

Q. What children?

A. Our children.

Q. How old are these children?

A. The oldest is 36.

Q. But you said you had only known this man 32 years.

A. That's one of the things I want straightened out by this board!

(The three mediators, Oscar Wimps, jurist; Theodore Spudd, famous psychologist, and O. Duffie Baggs, author, swoon, which is a great disappointment to them, as they had counted on making quite a radio hit.)

Q. (continuing)—Now let's see what the man in the case has to say. You came here so you could be guided by the board's decision?

A. No; I just jumped at my chance to get on the air.

Q. What is your answer to this woman's story?

A. The last ten years I have tired of her.

Q. Won't she let you leave?

A. Yes, but she won't let me take all the furniture and a half ton of coal!

* * * *

(The interrogator finds the mediators are still out and proceeds with the next case.)

* * * *

Q. What is your problem, madam?

A. It's about my 70-year-old mother. A couple of years ago I got married and we came home to live with her. My husband can't work as he has a mania for crossword puzzles. I tried working once and don't like it either. We were very happy with mother until the last six months.

Q. What is causing your unhappiness now?

A. Mother gave up her job at the iron mill!

Q. Since she is 70 years old, isn't it possible she has some excuse?

A. No. We had her examined by the family veterinarian, and he says she is still able to work all week if she rests Sundays.

* * * *

Q. What do you wish to know?

A. I want to know if a mother has a right to stop work.

Q. Now, let's get the other side. Mother, what have you to say?

A. She's crazy. I would be working right now but she made me quit to come down here on this radio program.

Q. Why did you do it?

A. She said if we went over good we might get a regular air engagement.

* * * *

Q. Judge Wimps, what is your view in this case?

Judge Wimps—I think the girl should return the $300 and go back to her sister.

Mr. Spudd—Blood is thicker than water. A rolling stone gathers no moss. What we have here is a plain case of glandular disturbance. I recommend a suit for damages.

Mr. Baggs (very thoughtfully)—It was either Napoleon or Henry the Seventh.

The interrogator (rather muddled)—What are you talking about, Mr. Baggs?

Mr. Baggs—Isn't this a quiz program?

Le Cron Case

By Walter Fitzmaurice

Administrative Complex

THE RESIGNATION of James Le Cron from the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs merits closer public notice than it has received. In a farewell blast, the director of the COIA's food supply division accused the State Department of obstructing his work. The charge and the department's curt denial shed little light on the inner struggle involved.

Mr. Le Cron is Vice President Wallace's long-standing associate and close friend. The Vice President differs over present and postwar economic policy with Secretary of State Hull. With Mr. Hull's policies now in the ascendancy, Mr. Le Cron is being held up as a victim of the administration's "detour to the right."

When the State Department disclaimed interference with Mr. Le Cron, however, his own chief, Nelson Rockefeller, concurred. To Mr. Le Cron's friends, the coordinator's action merely indicates his sympathy with Mr. Hull's economic views. But the coordinator's disowner of the charges and prompt acceptance of the resignation suggest that Mr. Le Cron may have been an administrative liability per se. The sharpness of his resignation letter betrayed an extreme crusading zeal.

THE FACTS behind the resignation, so far as this reporter could ascertain them, betray an administrative complex, not a State Department paralyzed by "divided authority . . . lack of administrative organization . . . want of directive policy," as Mr. Le Cron claimed.

Mr. Le Cron has been a figure in Latin-American food production since April, 1941. When he came in, the ships on which many Latin-American areas normally depend for food, were under heavy submarine attack.

The Board of Economic Warfare, then directed by Mr. Wallace and Milo Perkins, counted on those areas for wild rubber, quinine, hemp substitutes and other critical war supplies. It therefore authorized Mr. Rockefeller to set up a project providing the areas seeds, grants and technical aid to grow their own foods. Congress appropriated funds. Mr. Le Cron was appointed to direct the job.

Of necessity, the projects required negotiation with the foreign governments concerned. Relations with those governments are the charge of the Secretary of State. Mr. Hull accordingly was empowered by the President to determine whether the projects merited approval of the foreign governments and to prevent project overlappings which would invite vexation or ridicule abroad.

Lacking agronomists of its own, the State Department enlisted expert aid. A procedure grew up and was formalized under which the approval of the Agriculture Department's office of foreign agricultural relations was required before State Department action thereon.

THE PROCEDURE in effect put Mr. Le Cron at a potential rival's mercy. OFAR, also under Mr. Wallace's aegis, has long been trying to develop complementary trade, a process stimulating Latin-American agricultural products readily exportable in exchange for American manufactured goods. The Latin-American import food pinch found OFAR experimental stations in the field, ready to meet the need.

Loan Administrator Jesse Jones was another potential intruder on Mr. Le Cron's domain. His Export-Import Bank advances foreign governments loans for industrial, mineral and agricultural development. Yet, on the evidence of Mr. Le Cron's own letter, he was unmolested by either agency over a period of two years.

Mr. Le Cron cites a six-week delay in approval of his Paraguayan project. The delay resulted from Paraguay's objection to his project's legal form. But it was settled more than a year ago, long before a working alliance between Messrs. Hull and Jones helped put Mr. Wallace's policies in eclipse.

On his Nicaraguan project, Mr. Le Cron says, approval was delayed three months. The issue here was whether his cash incentive project or OFAR's long-range, scientifically planned program was better suited to supply the Panama Canal zone. With submarines under control, Nicaragua's need for subsistence foods was on the wane.

On these and his Bolivian and Ecuadorean projects, Mr. Le Cron's letter rests his case. As an alternative, Mr. Jones proposed Bolivian and Ecuadorean development corporations. Notwithstanding that his plan required return of the money with interest, the governments preferred it to Mr. Le Cron's, and the State Department upheld Mr. Jones.

The decision came in June, a month before the public airing of the Jones-Wallace feud by the principals cost the Vice President control of BEW. Mr. Le Cron may have felt that he, a Wallace disciple, was a victim of State Department politics which, in the larger BEW issue, certainly favored Mr. Jones.

But the record, itself, fails to present proof. The State Department office which decided against him was controlled by the Undersecretary, Sumner Welles, who, in disputes between Messrs. Wallace and Jones favored the former.

State Department coordination affects many agencies. Some are beginning to chafe thereunder and more resignations may come. If and when they do, the department's critics should suspend judgment until the facts are known.

West Coast Plane Workers Get New Induction Stay

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Selective Service has granted authority to California and Washington State directors to postpone the induction of aircraft production workers a second 60-day period to tide the West Coast aircraft industry over the present manpower crisis, Lawrence A. Appley, executive director of the War Manpower Commission, disclosed yesterday.

During the next 60 days, he explained, arrangements will be made to modify draft replacement schedules for the West Coast plans so that draft calls can be related to the plants' manpower schedules.

Authority Granted August 1

Authority to postpone induction of West Coast aircraft workers was granted August 1 for an initial 60-day period after the industry claimed that manpower difficulties were preventing it from meeting schedules.

As a result of the West Coast complaint, manpower and production officials in consultation with the Office of War Mobilization developed a comprehensive manpower and production control program now being installed.

Lieut. Col. Francis V. Keesling, jr., of Selective Service, told a Senate Military Affairs Subcommittee that the industry would have experienced manpower trouble even if Selective Service had not withdrawn a man. He explained that the West Coast program was adopted to curb labor turnover and provide the industry with sufficient workers to meet schedules.

1000 Inductions Delayed

In California, induction of more than 1000 workers has been postponed since August 1, Keesling said. The extended program will permit further stays until December 1.

To get an individual induction postponed, his employer must request the State director to take action. Induction-staying orders from California and Washington draft directors may cover California and Washington workers registered in other States.

Lieut.-Col. William Coons of Selective Service told reporters that draft calls for West Coast States had been trimmed somewhat "administratively" in recent months to reduce the number of deferment cases.

Because the Selective Service Act forbids the granting of blanket deferments, the Government has had to resort to the induction-staying technique, it was understood.

Col. W. N. Todd, Jr., Named Head of Army War College

Col. William N. Todd, jr., until recently deputy commander of the Army's services of supply in Central Africa, has been appointed post commandant of the Army War College, the War Department announced yesterday.

Colonel Todd succeeds Col. Claude L. Gamble who is returning from his temporary assignment as commandant of the War College to the position of post director of supplies and services.

Born September 8, 1895, at Easton-Leavenworth, Kans., Colonel Todd has been a Cavalry officer since 1917. Among his various Army duties was assignment to the Philippines where he served with the Twenty-sixth Philippine Scouts until 1941, when he was detailed to the Fourth Cavalry Brigade headquarters. In 1942 he was sent to Africa. He assumed his present rank in August, 1942.

U. S. Foreign Policy

Shield Of The Republic

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The Fundamental Principle Of A Foreign Policy

What do we mean by a foreign commitment and by the power to balance it? I mean by a foreign commitment an obligation, outside the continental limits of the United States, which may in the last analysis have to be met by waging war.

I mean by power the force which is necessary to prevent such a war or to win it if it cannot be prevented. In the term necessary power I include the military force which can be mobilized effectively within the domestic territory of the United States and also the reinforcements which can be obtained from dependable allies.

A foreign policy consists in bringing into balance, with a comfortable surplus of power in reserve, the nation's commitments and the nation's power. The constant preoccupation of the true statesman is to achieve and maintain this balance. Having determined the foreign commitments which are vitally necessary to his people, he will never rest until he has mustered the force to cover them.

For nation's, as for families, the level may vary at which a solvent balance is struck. If its expenditures are safely within its assured means, a family is solvent when it is poor, or is well to do, or is rich. The same principle holds true of nations. The statesman of a strong country may balance its commitments at a high level or at a low. But whether he is conducting the affairs of Germany, which has had dynamic ambitions, or the affairs of Switzerland, which seeks only to hold what it already has, or of the United States, he must still bring his ends and means into balance. If he does not he will follow a course that leads to disaster.

The foreign commitments which the American Nation is obliged to maintain are embodied in laws, such as the commitment to defend Hawaii or the Canal Zone; in treaties, as in the case of the Philippines; in binding official declarations like the Monroe Doctrine, and in conventions, which provide for the defense of the Western Hemisphere. The primary responsibility for carrying out these commitments rests upon the American people living in continental United States.

Before examining our foreign commitments it will be useful to remind ourselves that most of what is now the American continental homeland was once foreign territory, and that it became United States territory as a result of diplomacy and war.

The War of Independence was not won by American arms alone. In 1778 Franklin negotiated a treaty of alliance with Vergennes. In this treaty France promised to make common cause with the colonies until they had won their independence, and the colonies promised to defend French possessions in the West Indies. In 1779 Spain intervened in the war by making New Orleans a base for privateers against British shipping, and by seizing British posts in West Florida. In 1780 the Netherlands also went to war against Great Britain, and the Czarina of Russia, Catherine II, formed a League of Armed Neutrality which assisted the American colonies by obstructing the use of British sea power. Thus the American War of Independence was part of a general war in which most of the great powers participated.

The Peace of Paris with the American, and the other treaties which England signed on the same day with France and Spain, divided North America among Spain, the British Empire and the United States. Spain received everything west of the Mississippi and south of a line which gave her Florida. Britain kept what is now Canada, though the boundary was not clearly settled at the time. France took a few West Indian islands.

From this beginning we gradually acquired our present continental boundaries in six principal stages from 1803 to 1853.

First. By the Louisiana Purchase Jefferson obtained New Orleans and the mouth of the Mississippi, and a frontier running through what is now Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Texas, to Louisiana. This territory between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains had been Spanish since 1763. In October, 1800, by the secret treaty of San Ildefonso, the King of Spain ceded it to Napoleon. Jefferson was told about the treaty by Rufus King, the United States Minister in London, who heard of it from Lord Hawkesbury. England was then on the point of war with Napoleon, and opposed to the aggrandizement of French power in North America. Napoleon in the meantime had met a disaster in Santo Domingo, where thirty-five thousand troops died of yellow fever or were massacred by Negro insurgents. Assured of support from Britain, Jefferson took advantage of Napoleon's weakness, and negotiated with Talleyrand for the purchase of the whole Louisiana territory.

Second. In 1819, after border incidents and long negotiation, Spain ceded to us her lands east of the Mississippi, as well as her right to Oregon, in return for the assumption by the United States of its spoliation claims against Spain and the relinquishment of its claims to Texas.

Third. In 1846 President Polk served notice on England that in 12 months the joint occupation of the disputed Oregon territory would end. By negotiations a compromise was reached fixing the present boundaries.

Fourth. In 1846 also Texas, which had seceded from Mexico, was incorporated into the Union. This territory included most of New Mexico, parts of Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Fifth. In 1848, at the conclusion of the war with Mexico, the territory which now includes California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and part of New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming was ceded to the United States.

Sixth. In 1853 the Gila River valley was purchased from Mexico under the Gadsden Treaty.

In these six stages the territory of the original 13 colonies expanded, with minor rectifications, to the present continental limits of the United States. One result was the acquisition of a vast homeland. A second result was, once the independence of the Spanish colonies had been recognized in 1822 and confirmed by the Monroe Doctrine in 1823, the disappearance from North America of France and Spain.

After that Britain was the only great power which had a common frontier with the United States. If the boundaries of 1783 had remained the boundaries of the United States, the young Republic would have had France as her neighbor on the Mississippi and Spain on the frontier of Georgia. This would have left the United States with small means within its narrow limits, and committed to the defense of a long land frontier against the shifting combinations of three great European powers.

Rent Control Commended

D. C. Act A Model

Praise for the District's rent-control system was voiced yesterday by Cyrus Crane Willmore, St. Louis, president, National Association of Real Estate Boards, in an address before Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Speaking to more than 300 guests and members of the neighboring Virginia realtor group at their annual barbecue, Willmore described the local rent-control system as a model one that should be extended over the entire country instead of the present Office of Price Administration's arrangement.

Admitting rent control is a wartime necessity, he criticized the way in which OPA has handled it, and referred to Washington's program as a model of how it should operate.

Cogswell Praised

He said that District Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell has shown how good control can be made workable, calling the system fair and just, and one that has satisfied both tenants and property owners.

In the District, he emphasized, they are not afraid to call landlords and tenants together to settle differences, adding the administrator is not fearful of consultation with realty authorities on current problems, nor is experienced advice on property management scorned.

Control of rents, which means control of private property owned by citizens, he explained, is a serious matter and a problem to be approached soberly and respectfully for all complications involved—a matter in which local judgment and control should have an important place.

Local Participation

"The District system which operates under its own act, independently of the national OPA system, is based on local participation," he made clear. "It is under local control. It has made an excellent record. It is a good system and has shown that rent control when properly handled, can be made to work equitably without causing injury, hardship or conflict."

Unfortunately, he asserted, a far different situation prevails throughout the country, experience with OPA's system having shown that because of overcentralization and inflexibility, hardship has been created and ill-will caused between tenants and landlords.

Abuses have resulted, various OPA policies have invaded the rights of citizens and overridden State and local laws, Willmore declared, citing condemnation of these practices by the Smith Committee and is called unconstitutional by a Georgia Federal court.

"Since we recognize that a fair and equitable system of rent control is necessary in crowded war centers," he concluded on this subject, "the country would do well to take the District of Columbia Rent Control Act as a model for national legislation. I urge that this be done and that a stop be put to further OPA fumbling."

The Gallup Poll

Large Majority Favor Drafting Single Girls Before Fathers for Non-Combat War Jobs

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 9.—Slated for early consideration by Congress when it convenes next week is the question of drafting fathers into the armed forces.

Since many of the fathers would be used in nonfighting jobs in order to release younger men for front-line service, the proposal has been made that single women be drafted instead to take these nonfighting jobs. If the issue finally resolves itself to that alternative the great majority of American voters, including the women themselves, would favor the drafting of single women rather than the drafting of an equivalent number of fathers.

This was revealed in a nation-wide survey in which reporters for the Institute talked with men and women of all classes in scores of cities, small towns and rural areas from Maine to California, representing a true cross-section of the American public. The issue was put to voters in this form:

The Army can either draft 300,000 single women, aged 21-35, for the WACS for non-fighting jobs, or it can draft the same number of married men with families for the same work. Which plan would you favor?

The results are:

|---|---|
| Think Single Women Should Be Drafted | 81% |
| Think Married Men With Families Should Be Drafted | 13 |
| Undecided | 6 |

Vote of Women

One notable fact highlighted in the survey is that the women of the country are overwhelmingly in favor of a draft for single women.

The vote of all women is 84 per cent in favor of such a draft, and the vote of single women interviewed in the survey is approximately the same. As for the males, the married men with children vote 80 per cent in favor of drafting the women, and the vote of both single and married men combined is 78 per cent.

"A Man's Job"

In opposing the drafting of women voters cited as their main argument that "a woman's place is not in the army; that's a man's job."

Those who favor the idea, on the other hand, say that drafting single women would not break up homes the way drafting fathers would. "Girls are independent, and it is easier for them to go"—such is the typical attitude.

Parley On New Tax Bill Held By President, Top Advisers

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday took a hand in readying a tax program for Congress as the House Ways and Means Committee tentatively scheduled a new revenue hunt opening September 20.

To the White House were summoned the Administration's top-most tax advisers to consider alternative Treasury programs estimated to raise 12 billion dollars more or less.

No decisions were announced, but it was understood that the group will meet again before congressional tax making machinery moves into action.

Need Greater Than Ever

The President made it plain in his speech launching the War Bond Drive that he considers the need greater than ever for Americans to give freely in taxes as well as War Bond purchases at this crucial stage of the war.

Besides Secretary Henry Morgenthau and General Counsel Randolph Paul, representing the Treasury, the conference was attended by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes and War Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson. Also present was New York Supreme Court Judge Samuel Rosenman, personal adviser to the President.

Presence of Rosenman, who has counseled the Administration on much of its emergency war machinery, stirred speculation on whether a question of tax jurisdiction was raised between Morgenthau and Vinson in charge of over-all anti-inflation moves.

In quarters near Vinson this has been generally discounted.

Morgenthau to Act

Morgenthau is expected to present the Treasury's tax recommendations to Congress as usual, with Vinson, in his capacity of economic stabilization director, helping out on taxes in the rough spots.

Whether the President would attempt to settle some division of opinion within the Administration on tax methods could not be learned. Byrnes and Vinson have favored compulsory savings, while the Treasury has opposed this. The economic stabilizer has opposed a spending tax, formerly favored by the Treasury. One informant said yesterday's discussion did not get around to details of the program.

The Ways and Means Committee meanwhile, in executive session, discussed a proposal for further simplification of income tax forms. Chairman Doughton later said the matter had been referred to "the experts"—Treasury General Counsel Paul and Colin F. Stam, chief of the congressional tax staff.

Coal Outlook Called Bad

Warning By Ickes

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

An appreciable gain in shipments of fuel oil to the East Coast was offset by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday with assertions that changed military contingencies will have an adverse affect on the amount of fuel which can be made available in the East, particularly coal.

Ickes told his press conference that the "coal situation in the United States is bad and it's going to get worse," partly because shipments are already under way to our military authorities in fallen Italy.

This coal, he said, will be used by the Army to maintain utilities, ships, locomotives, manufacturing plants and similar operations necessary for the furtherance of the war.

U. S. Must Bear Load

Ickes pointed out that some help in the way of fuel for military uses may come from England and South Africa, but the United States will have to bear the burden of the responsibility at a time when coal already is becoming a scarce commodity.

While reporting that all principal petroleum products on the East Coast increased during the week ended September 4, Ickes warned that the withdrawal of Italy from the war would mean no lessening of the military demand for American oil.

As a consequence, he urged the utmost conservation by domestic consumers in the use of gasoline and all other petroleum products.

"In forcing Italy out of the war," he declared, "we have but opened the door to a wider and much vaster scale of military operations against Nazi Germany."

He disclosed that his office is reconsidering the advisability of requiring even commercial establishments to convert from oil to coal in view of the critical coal situation.

The petroleum supply report showed that gasoline, kerosene, home heating oil and residual fuel oil increased last week to 40.3 per cent of normal, a 1.2 per cent jump over the previous week.

Heating-Oil Stocks Up

The upturn, it was reported, was due principally to increased heating-oil stocks which are receiving particular attention in view of the approaching winter months.

"As for gasoline," the report stated, "the situation remains tight with inventories at critical levels."

WPB Moves To Save Goods For Civilians

The War Production Board yesterday issued a directive to several hundred manufacturers of about 30 types of civilian goods, directing that they distribute specified proportions of their total output in civilian channels.

The directive was intended to stop the "raiding" of civilian supplies through direct purchase by the armed services and other Government agencies from the manufacturers. Government buying frequently has prevented civilians from receiving the goods intended by WPB for them.

The directive, effective during the fourth quarter of the year, starting October 1, specifically names the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission, Aircraft Resources Control Office and persons buying for direct export as being ineligible to purchase the earmarked goods from manufacturers.

The directive, it was explained, does not permit manufacturers to disregard priority-rated orders outright, but instructs manufacturers to notify the WPB immediately if the filling of these orders would cause the firms to dip into their civilian allocationos. WPB then will either authorize the manufacturer to disregard the Government orders or "make whatever adjustments it considers appropriate."

The proportion of goods which manufacturers must set aside for civilian allocations. WPB then factory, it was stated, and the products covered by it will be subject to change from time to time.

The products for which quotas will be assigned for the fourth quarter include:

Glass cooking utensils; lamps and lanterns burning liquid fuels, bedsprings and innerspring mattresses; metal hospital beds; ranges using electric; razor blades; plated silverware; clocks; watches and chronometers; kitchen and household articles, common and safety pins; office supplies, including marking devices, pens and pencils; church goods; cutlery.

Cast-iron radiators; warm air furnaces; cast-iron boilers; warm-air distribution equipment, including registers, stoves and smoke pipes; hot-water equipment (not electric), including heaters and tanks for domestic use; metal insect screen cloth; nails and tacks (but not steel wire nails); fiber, steel and wire brushes; surgical and medical instruments and equipment; electrical physiotherapy apparatus; ex-ray apparatus and tubes; dental instruments, apparatus and equipment; dental supplies and appliances, opthalmic goods; surgical and medical supplies and orthopedic appliances.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Bank Dividend Voted

Directors of the Bank of Commerce and Savings have declared the usual quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share, payable September 30 to stockholders of record September 20, according to Thomas J. Groom, president.

Now, a Soft Drink Shortage

The American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages, a trade association whose headquarters are in Washington, yesterday issued a statement explaining the current shortage in soft drinks (or haven't you noticed?).

"The supply of soft drinks for civilian consumption," said the ABCB, "this year probably will total about 11½ billion bottles, as compared with 16 billion bottles, as pre-war year 1941. The amount of soft drinks . . . is restricted, along with that of various other foods, by sugar and gasoline rationing and other wartime measures.'

The manpower shortage and a WPB order restricting bottle production are said to be other reasons why you get the "all out" reply on requests of bottled "cokes," root beer ginger ale, et al.

Two Are Promoted By Morgan & Co.

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Appointment of Sidney Lanier as vice president and treasurer and R. Gordon Wasson as vice president, by the board of directors, was announced today by J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc.

Lanier, a Morgan employe since 1925, has been treasurer since its incorporation in 1940. Born at Greenwich, Conn., in 1901, he was graduated from Princeton in 1924.

Wasson joined the Morgan firm in 1934 and became assistant secretary in 1941. He was formerly with the New York Herald Tribune and New Haven Register after being an instructor at Columbia College. Born in Great Falls, Mont., in 1898, he was graduated from the Columbia School of Journalism in 1920.

Week's Power Output Reaches New Peak

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Electric power output hit a new peak during the week ended September 4 with 4,350,511,000 kilowatt-hours distributed, compared with 4,322,195,000 a week earlier, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

The latest week's power production was 18.4 per cent higher than the 3,672,921,000 kilowatt-hours produced in the similar 1942 week.

The Southern States again led the major geographical divisions with an increase of 22.4 per cent ove rthe same week in 1942. Other increases included: New England 5.9 per cent, Mid-Atlantic 19.6, Central industrial 14.3, West central 11.9, Rocky Mountain 17.7, and Pacific Coast 22.4.

'So Proudly We Hail' Opens at Loew's Capitol

By Marjorie Kelly

Among the stories which have caught the public imagination in this war not the least exciting certainly is that of the nurses who stayed to the end on Bataan and Corregidor, carrying on their work in the face of dreadful odds, working in makeshift hospitals in tents or underground tunnels, and cheering and reassuring the defenders by their mere presence.

"So Proudly We Hail," the Paramount film which opened at Loew's Capitol yesterday morning, is the story of these women. Director-producer Mark Sandrich, whose name appears on the credit list also as cowriter with Allan Scott, says that no one really should take credit for writing the script. "It was written by history, even to the happy ending," he said. "All we did was to assemble the data and start shooting."

The result of this tripartite collaboration between Sandrich, Allen Scott and history is an impressive tribute to the women whose heroism meant so much in the delaying actions on Bataan and Corregidor.

The story begins with the return of a remnant of the original group of nurses to the States to receive their citations, after having been evacuated at the last possible moment. Lieut. Janet Davidson, played by Claudette Colbert, is in a state of shock, from which no one can rouse her. The doctor tells the rest of the girls that if he could get her attention he would have some hope for her. But she doesn't seem to hear anything that is said to her. If they will tell him the whole story of their stay on Bataan, perhaps he will understand enough of what is affecting her to be able to save her. This is the frame of the story, and as the girls talk there are flashbacks to the grim months on Bataan, telling the story of the siege as it affected Lieutenant Davidson and the rest of the group.

It is a straightforwardly told story, which makes no attempt to glamorize the girls—on the contrary!—and depends for its dramatic effect upon the simple facts which were dramatic indeed and certainly need no embellishing.

There are some stock situations, and a routine characterization or two, but all in all, it is a rather fine film. One of the best lines I can think of offhand is spoken during a discussion after a battle of whether they should take a bit of steel out of a boy's leg, when they had no anesthetic to give him. "It probably wouldn't start an infection," he says. "Chances are it's good American steel."

Of the three principal characters, Veronica Lake acquits herself best, in this opinion. As the nurse whose fiance had been killed by the Japs and who lived on only with the single purpose of killing as many Japs as possible, she has several tensely dramatic scenes, and she makes the most of them.

Claudette Colbert as Lieutenant Davidson plays the role with understanding and warm feeling, but thoroughly in the Colbert manner. If she would just once learn a new mannerism or discard an old one—maybe play a character without the trick of sucking in her lower lip, for instance, she might be easier to accept as someone else than Miss Colbert.

Paulette Goddard is funny and occasionally touching as the third of the trio, Lieut. Joan O'Doul, who travels from base to base with a black lace nightie as her only momento of a more glamorous existence. To keep her morale up, she says, and wears it on Bataan and Corregidor, when for months she has not been out of GI over-alls in the daytime.

But Sonny Tufts will probably be the most-talked of player in the film. Sonny is the newcomer Paramount has been building up ever since they got him, and this is his first appearance before the public. Judging by the adeptness with which he plays this first role, he ought to be around for a long time.

Others who should be mentioned are Barbara Britton, as another of the nurses; Walter Abel, who briefly seen but good as the Chaplain; Mary Servoss, the hard, blustery "Ma" McGregor, and Ted Hecht, who as the native doctor, has two excellent scenes.

The Capitol's sixteenth birthday celebration having started yesterday morning, Organist Art Brown of the stage show regulars, isn't letting you forget it. He has the audience singing "Happy Birthday" in the community singing part of the program, and from the zest with which they roared it, that audience at least musta meant it.

The current show is headlined by Jackie Niles, a fresh and really funny comedian. He had the house in hysterics with his imitation of Frank Sinatra. He opens up with "Sinatra is the only guy in the business who's thinner than I am. They call him a "swoon singer"—well the only one who looks like he's going to faint when he sings is him. He always hangs onto the mike—I don't say he HAS to, but——" and then he goes into "As Time Goes By," singing in a green spotlight. The song reminds me of a discordant note among the love messages scrawled on the walls of the Paramount Theater in New York (where Sinatra sang recently, which demands acidly, "Frank Sinatra, why don't you get yourself a square meal?"

Others in the show are Blair and Dean, who do some very pretty ballroom dancing; Evalyn Tyner, returned from her tour, who does a piano number, and Mildred Bailey, known as the Rocking Chair Lady, who sings. An old hand at the crooning game, the chubby Miss Bailey sang with Paul Whiteman, and was one of the first women ever to sing with a band. Her songs here are "Ol' Rocking Chair's Got Me," her theme song, "Taking a Chance on Love," and a comically appropriate song on scrapping the fat.

Disney's 'Fantasia' Revived at Pix as Top Half of Double Bill

By Angele de T. Gingras

"Fantasia" is back in town this week at the Pix. You'll want to go again.

Disney makes a screen poem of Tschaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite." It is the poetry of falling leaves and dew on spiderwebs. It is wild roses with the morning on them. It is wind or water. It is the underbrushes world of mushrooms. It is blossom petals in the brook and seedlings on the wind. It is the snow on a pine tree and a frost star on a window pane. Wispy long-legged fairies paint the leaves and run strings of dew drops along the branches.

To build a cartoon story around "Sorcerer's Apprentice" by Dukas, Disney takes the essence of old fairy tales, of medieval men of magic and of inanimate things which take on the animate qualities of human beings. Mickey Mouse plays the sorcerer's apprentice. There is a fresh broom who carries buckets of water down a beautiful curve of stairs and then multiplies himself and nearly drowns Mickey.

Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring" has all the elemental earth movements in it. There is early one-celled life moving in the waters, multiplying itself and coming up out of the waters on to the land and into the air over the land. Great lumbering animals walk on the earth's surface.

Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony" takes the audience into a mythological spring. There is a bulgy Bacchus who becomes involved with wine, a donkey and a lightning bolt. There are winged horses done in cartoon pastels who float around on the wings of the wind. Strange creatures long frozen on Greek vases come alive to dance on the screen grass until a storm ruffles up the placidness of the scene.

Mlle. Hippo Upanova is the star of Ponchielli's "Dance of the Hours." She is a bulky ballet dancer who out-ballets her hippos of the ensemble. Ben Ali Gator gets a crush on her and is eventually crushed by her in a terrific climatic dance number which literally brings down several cartoon pillars.

Fantasia's closing numbers are Moussorgsky's "Night on Bald Mountain" and Schubert's "Ave Maria." In the first, Disney has a cartoon session with all the symbols of death and evil. There are gravestones against a night sky and devil-creatures and skeletons. Then the church bells ring, the mist-evil clears away, and funny little monks with candles march in long lines to Schubert's "Ave Maria."

And there's another picture on the bill, "Prairie Chickens." There is a haunted house in it and men dressed up like skeletons and ghosts. Cattle rustlers get involved with some guys who are on the up-and-up. These, in turn, get mixed up with a dozen Hollywood glamour girls playing a girls' school on a tour. You'll laugh at it but you won't have any intelligent reason for doing so.

above, as he appears in camouflage in the film, "So Proudly We Hail," which opened yesterday morning at Loew's Capitol. In the role of "Kansas," Sonny plays opposite Paulette Goddard, a considerable achievement for a newcomer, and gives an excellent account of himself

An American Institution

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 9.—Bing Crosby sticks with Paramount, which surprises nobody. Details of his new contract, just revealed to me, call for a straight seven-year ticket without options, two pictures a year, with privilege—insisted upon by Bing—of doing one annually at another studio . . . From Paramount alone Bing will collect close to $3,000,000 for the seven-year period, roughly $400,000 a year, with other income putting him on top of the heap in the matter of total take . . . Bing's is Hollywood's greatest success story. He's now starting his thirteenth straight year with Paramount, and in the course of his bondage to that outfit he's made many outstanding hit films. He's never lost a friend, dropped a pal, or turned out a flop. He's weathered many a storm, crooned when crooning was the thing, and revealed the greatest ballad-singing talent of the generation when that was indicated. He never strives nor strains but just goes along like that ol' man rive he loves to warble about. First thing you know he'll be an American institution in the George M. Cohan tradition.

BING CROSBY

Unscrambling Sinatra

Still a lot of pother about who owns Frankie Sinatra. Personally, I don't think his swooners give a hoot as long as he throws them that come-hither baritone, but let's keep the record straight . . . Joe Ross of the law firm headed by Judge Isaac Pacht, took a $60,000 check up to Tommy Dorsey's house. "Let's play some gin rummy," said Ross. "Okay," said Dorsey. "You can use this piece of paper for stakes," said Ross. The piece of paper was signed by Jules Stein, head of the Music Corporation of America. It was the price of the 43½ per cent interest in Frankie, which was owned by Dorsey and Dorsey's manager, Vannerson. Judge Pacht is the top movie legal trouble shooter, who keeps all the other trouble shooters out of trouble. It needed an elder statesman like him to take Frankie apart and put him together again . . . Henry Jaffe, lawyer who came from New York to sit in on the unscrambling of Sinatra, said to me, "Sinatra has to pay income tax on his total earnings, even the part that others collect. When he gets through he hasn't enough to pay off Uncle Sam. That's how deep he's in" . . . I say it's a bloomin' shame. And all the more touching is a pretty tribute that arrived at my desk today purportedly from a score or so of fellows working on the set of Frankie's "Higher and Higher" at RKO, telling what a grand guy Frankie is. They love him, and even though I don't wear bobbie sox except in my own garden, and never learned the gentle art of swooning, I'm impressed. Tommy Dorsey loves him. He told me so. "That's why I sold my piece of him to MCA," Tommy told me "because they'll look after his career to his own best interest. I had lots of others bigger than Stein's." For a walking major fracture who's been the beneficiary of the season's most audacious campaign of sheer ballyhoo charlantry, our Frankie should be a very happy lad and quite pleased to let well enough alone.

Dean of Women

Height of anonymity in Hollywood is the assistant director. Sam Goldwyn has one who's made news by taking on the chore of shepherding the 34 Goldwyn girls in "Up in Arms" when a lot of others were scared stiff by the assignment. Fellow is one Maurie Suess, who managed such pugs as Lou Salica, Maxie Rosenbloom and Ceferino Garcia and now takes phone calls, makes dates and holds the hands of Sam's whole bevy. "Od, O, them good times I usta have," Maurie sighed. "Dames are okay—but I'm combin' 'em outa my hair."

Gypsy Makes a Deal

Hollywood, Sept. 9 (INS).—Gypsy Rose Lee, a very smart girl when it comes to business, has made a deal to write directly for the screen. She is writing "Belle of the Yukon," a story of the gold rush days in the Klondike, for William Goetz. Gypsy arrives here the first of the year to work with Bill and with William Seiter, who has been signed by International Pictures to direct the Klondike epic.

GYPSY ROSE LEE

The colorful period of 1898, when the whole world rushed to Alaska, and eggs were $100 a dozen, is the background of "Belle of the Yukon," and it's to be in Technicolor. Gypsy, meanwhile, is working with Mike Todd on her play, "The Naked Genius." This will be her second story to reach the movies. Her first, "G-String Murders," made its screen appearance as the controversial "Lady of Burlesque."

When I called Universal last week to check the story that the sequence made by Alan Curtis and Gloria Jean was "out" of "Flesh and Fantasy" they were as concerned as if I had rattled the skeleton in the closet. Now it comes to light this particular episode is so good—and "Flesh and Fantasy" is so long—it has been lifted and will be developed into a full-length feature on its own. Even with Gloria Jean and Alan missing, the "U" bosses are doing handsprings over Charles Boyer's first production that has Charles, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward G. Robinson, Betty Field, Robert Benchley, Thomas Mitchell and Robert Cummings in the spotlight.

I was talking with Dorothy Lamour at Wynn Rocamora's cocktail party when she met Pola Negri for the first time. Grasping Pola's hand, Dorothy said: "I'm so thrilled at meeting you. I used to be the first in line at all your pictures. You were my favorite." Pola, who looks barely 30 and, more than anyone I know, has kept her looks and youth, replied: "I can return the compliment. When I was in Europe before the war you were the favorite, and I'm just as thrilled at meeting you." Then, turning to me, Pola said: "I will have a secret to tell you soon." "Another affair of the heart, Pola?" I asked, but she only looked mysterious.

The best news I know is that Aileen Pringle has herself a perfectly wonderful job. Aileen will have the lead in "Mothers Day," a rip-roaring comedy that opens September 27 in San Francisco. If it is a success it will be taken to the New York stage and everybody in Hollywood is keeping fingers crossed that it will be. It has the backing of some of our most important Hollywood producers, and Aileen should be excellent, for she's a fine actress and for many years was at the top of her profession on the screen.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: The blister on Martha Raye's foot has turned out to be an infection and she's been out of "Pin-Up Girl" for five days; Gordon Oliver, Hollywood actor, will marry Ethel Lambert, New York socialite, very soon; I like the title of the song Judy Garland has written with Kay Thompson, her gal arranger. It's "I Fell and Broke My Heart."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We are in receipt of an interoffice memo from Walter Haight, The Post's Racing Editor, who, it seems, is considerably aggrieved at Baseball Commissioner Judge Landis and wants to know where Landis gets off.

POVICH

"Where does Landis get off?" is the deft touch with which Haight backs into his subject. "I see by the papers that he is threatening an investigation of the Phillies because George Widener, a racing man, owns some shares of stock in the team. If Landis doesn't leave my racket alone, I'll have plenty to say about his. In fact, I might just as well say it.

"Landis' holier-than-thou attitude about keeping racing men divorced from baseball rates a laugh. Why doesn't he clean up his own house first? You can walk into most any big league ball park and get knocked down by bookies ready to quote you the price on today's game. At least racetrack betting is licensed and the State gets a nice cut in taxes. It's open-handed. Nothing undercover, like betting on the ball games.

"Landis would like to have you believe the polite fiction that baseball men don't bet on the races. I'd like to have the bookie concession in some of the players' clubhouses. What right does Landis have to look down his nose at racing, anyway? Old Eagle Beak needs his wings clipped."

Landis' aversion to horse racing dates from the day that he took charge of the big leagues after the expose of the crooked World Series of 1919. It was one of the devices by which he attempted to restore public confidence in the game which was rocked by the revelation that the Black Sox had thrown the World Series to the Cincinnati Reds. In that era, racing had a black eye anyway. It was a convenient whipping boy.

He didn't get tough, though, with racing-minded baseball men until a few years ago when he ordered Rogers Hornsby ejected from the World Series press box at Chicago because Hornsby had the frankness to confess that he liked to bet on horse racing. The late John McGraw, now in baseball's Hall of Fame, owned a racetrack in Havana. Landis didn't make him liquidate. McGraw was a big figure in baseball.

Landis wouldn't let Bing Crosby buy the Boston Braves a couple of years ago whene that team was in desperate need of financial support, because Crosby happened to own some race horses. Quite beside the point was the fact that the popular Crosby is an incurable baseball fan with a profound and sentimental interest in the game, in contrast to some businessmen club owners whose design for owning a team is the profits therein.

His objection to the racing influence in baseball is such fetish with Landis that a few years ago when Walter O. Briggs, the owner of the Detroit Tigers, presented his pennant-winning squad with a gift of leather wallets, one baseball writer told Hank Greenberg, "My God, you can't accept that. Landis wouldn't' like it. Look what it says on that wallet in gold leaf, 'Saddle Leather.'"

If Landis does, indeed try to get tough with Mr. Widener and attempt to make him liquidate his stock in the Phillies, it should be fun following developments. What happens if Widener refuses to get out and demands that Landis take him to the courts? It would be the sort of show-down that baseball hasn't had in decades.

Landis' power over clubowners is supposedly iron-clad under the contract he forced them to sign. He is given broad powers to act under "the best interests of baseball" clause, with the further provision that he be the judge of what "the best interests" of baseball might be. Conceivably he might walk into a club owner's office and declare:

"Mr. Smith, I don't like the color of the tie you are wearing this morning. And furthermore, I do not like the way you comb your hair. I deem it not consistent with the best interests of baseball. Therefore, liquidate, quick I am the Commissioner of Baseball and I refer you to the contract you signed with me."

That would be something for the courts to decide, of course. Whether a party to a contract can sign away his legal rights to recourse in the courts, would be the point involved, we assume. But Landis was a jurist of high standing before he took the baseball job. Whether he would bother to include provisions in his contract that wouldn't stand up in court, we wouldn't know. Mr. Widener may choose to find out and, as we were saying, that would be fun.

Central American Writers Propose Big League Tour

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—As part of the "good neighbor" policy, a group of Central American newspapermen proposed today that two major league baseball teams tour their countries this winter.

Such an exhibition series, leading to other sports promotions, would be an effective means of developing friendship an dmutual understanding, the nine editors in the group agreed. Baseball is the dominant sport in Panama and Nicaragua, they said, and is gaining ground in other Central American republics.

The journalists, visiting war industries under auspices of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, took time to watch the St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh Pirates play yesterday.

"George Kurowski, Cardinal third baseman, probably is more popular in Panama than he is right here in St. Louis," said Carlos Sole Bosch, editor of the Estrella de Panama.

"When he hit that game-winning home run in the World Series, Panama went wild with joy. The Cardinals are 'our' team in Panama."

Boys from the age of 10 years are playing baseball now in Honduras, said Vicente Machado Valle, editor of La Epoca of Tegucigalpa.

"My own little boy asked me to bring back a real big league baseball, bat and glove," he laughed.

The editors predicted a visit of major league teams would not only be successful from a morale standpoint but would pay for itself financially.

"We have the baseball fans and we have the necessary fields. Big league teams have never visited us. They would create a sensation," asserted Ramon Blanco, editor of Guatemala's El Imparcial.

Ovidio Rodas Corzo, also representing El Imparcial, declared the success of a visit by major league clubs would be beyond question.

Dr. Eduardo Morgan of Panama's La Renovacion, recommended an interchange of players and coaches of colleges and universities as a valuable step toward promoting good relations.

Tribe Wins Opener, 8-3; Loses, 10-3

Smith Wins 15th For Cleveland; Hal White Takes Nightcap Easily

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 9.—The Cleveland Indians maintained their grip on the American League's second place today by dividing a doubleheader with the challenging Detroit Tigers, winning the opener 8 to 3 and dropping the nightcap 10 to 3.

The Indians smashed out 16 hits in the opener, sending Virgil Trucks to his eighth defeat. Lefty Al Smith hurled a seven-hitter and gained his fifteenth victory against five defeats. Jimmy Outlaw, just up from Buffalo of the International League, homered for Detroit.

In the nightcap the Tigers gathered 12 hits, chasing Allie Reynolds in the second inning to his tenth defeat. Little Hal White spaced seven hits for his seventh victory. Rookie Dick Wakefield, who had gone hitless in 15 tries, got three singles in the nightcap but gained no ground on Luke Appling of Chicago, league batting leader.

District Ring Ratings Bring No Surprises

Ratings of local boxers by the D. C. Boxing Commission were "according to plan." From Al Hart's heavyweight dominance down to Jimmy Jeanette's bantamweight rule, the lists brought no surprises. John Garner, "Mr. Arr's, is entrenched on top of the heaps in both the light heavyweight and middleweight classes and is the first to hold two District titles since boxing was legalized here. Frankie Wills heads the welterweights, Lew Hanbury sets the pace for the lightweights and Danny Petro is the featherweight champ.

The complete ratings:

HEAVYWEIGHTS—1, Al Hart; 2, Claudie Villar; 3, George Parks.

LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHTS—1, John Garner; 2, Stoney Lewis; 3, Buddy Thomas; 4, Tee Huber; 5, Billy Duncan; 6, Joe Price; 7, Herschel Todd.

MIDDLEWEIGHTS—1, John Garner; 2, Steve Mamakos; 3, Bobby Brown; 4, Jimmy Hill; 5, Nay Palmer.

FEATHERWEIGHTS—1, Danny Petro; 2, Kid Alexander; 3, Wayman Stewart; 4, Johnny Canfield.

BANTAMWEIGHTS—1, Jimmy Jeanette.

FLYWEIGHTS—No competition.

Oana Fractures Wrist; Ends Hectic Year of Baseball

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 9.—A final new chapter has been written on the 1943 baseball career of Henry (Prince) Oana, Hawaiian right-handed pitcher.

Granted his free agency, Oana signed in June with the Detroit Tigers and made good as a relief pitcher and pinch-hitter.

Last month Commissioner K. M. Landis, reversing a decision, ordered Oana back to Milwaukee of the American Association. With the Brewers near the pennant, Oana served as pitcher and right fielder until the other night when he fractured his wrist sliding into third base.

"It's all part of a year's work, I guess," he said sadly today to his former mates in the Tiger clubhouse.

Mel Ott Signs New Contract With Giants

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 9.—Mel Ott, about to complete his second season managing the New York Giants with his club in the National League cellar, was given a new contract today for three years.

In making the announcement President Horace Stoneham declined to discuss the terms of the agreement, but it has been estimated that Ott was paid $25,000 annually for his services as player-manager in 1942 and 1943 and probably will continue at the same figure.

However, the veteran right-fielder, whom John McGraw brought directly from high school in New Orleans in 1925, has indicated that he would not play regularly next year.

Last year, after succeeding Bill Terry as manager, Ott led the Giants to third place with what was generally considered a fine job of master-minding. But this year the club, manned by failing old-timers like Carl Hubbell, Dick Bartell, Billy Jurges, Ernie Lombardi and Ott himself, has never been a contender for the first division.

Grays Help South Defeat North, 6-4

With more than half of their team composed of the Washington Homestead Grays, the South defeated an all-star North team, picked from Newark, New York and Philadelphia, before 9000 at Griffith Stadium last night. The score was 6-4.

The Northerners took a 4-run lead on Bill Walker in the first inning, but in their half inning the South began to close the gap, as Kimbro came home on Hooker's balk, and Tom Easterling doubled Buck Leonard across the plate. The South scored again in the fifth on Josh Gibson's clean hit over second, on which Benjamin came home.

The game was won in the seventh when Leonard walked, went to third on Gibson's drive to right, and came home, along with Easterling, on Bankhead's double to the right field wall.

Bergman Seeking to Correct Flaws in Play of Redskins

Coach Stresses More Speed on Kick-Off, Warns Against Mistakes in Bears' Clash

The Redskins were taken to task yesterday in a drill designed to correct mistakes of last Sunday's Green Bay Packer game shown to them the night before in movies of the 23-21 defeat in Baltimore.

Coach Dutch Bergman termed them typical September mistakes but he wants no repetition in Sunday's exhibition date with the Chicago Bears, another Baltimore Stadium engagement.

Sloppy tackling was the principle fault as the films disclosed the Packers made valuable yardage on several occasions when they should have been stopped by expert tackling but were merely brushed aside by careless and schoolboy defensive work.

Bergman impressed upon his growing squad the necessity of taking full and quick advantage of any offensive opening, something the 'Skins were below par in accomplishing Sunday, and the necessity of better ball handling.

More Speed Needed

The 'Skins were also a little slow in getting downfield on kick-offs. Unless they pull up the slack in this department some of those speedy Bear backs will be away with a touchdown in the Sunday test.

Bergman was fairly well satisfied with the showing of his rookie crop against the Packers. He hopes to use Jack Jenkins and Frank Akins to more advantage providing Jenkins can improve on his defensive play. The latter showed a particular weakness on pass defense against the Packers.

The Redskin squad now numbers 32 but newcomers such as Leo Stasica, Frank Ribar, Lou Rymkus and Eldon Werkheiser will hardy be ready for Sunday's test. The former Eagles, Ken Hayden and Jack Smith, gained in the Roy Zimmerman trade, are beginning to shake off the stiffness of early season training and may break into the reserve list, particularly Hayden.

Slash Scheduled

With at least four men due to be slashed before the league home opener with the Brooklyn Dodgers, the reserves are now battling for jobs and Bergman should have little difficulty bringing out the best in them.

In an expected fullback shift, Andy Farkas will get the starting call in Bob Seymour's place, while Dutch will make another temporary line change in subbing Joe Zeno in Clyde Shugart's starting berth at tackle.

The paid attendance Sunday is almost a certainty to top last week's figure of around the 25,000 mark and plus the 10,00C servicemen admitted free the crowd may reach 50,000. M. W. W.

Hoover Sees Dodgers Edge Phillies, 7 to 6

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 9.—With Herbert Hoover in a box seat and catcher Mickey Owen at shortstop, just by way of giving the spectators at Ebbets Field variety, the Brooklyn Dodgers scrambled to a 7-to-6 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies today with a three-run rally in the seventh inning.

Rookie Rex Barney, who started on the mound for the Dodgers, gave up three runs in the first inning and two more in the fourth before giving way to Les Webber, who received credit for the victory.

In the first, Barney loaded the bases, forced in a run with a walk and gave up two on a single by Merrill May. In the fourth he again loaded the bases and one run crossed on an infield out and another on a single by Ron Northey.

The Dodgers had no trouble overcoming the original deficit because Augie Galan homered with one on and Billy Herman hit a round-tripper with the bases empty in the first inning and Dixie Walker doubled a run across in the second.

But Riehard (Kewpie) Barrett kept them under wraps thereafter until the seventh, when two singles and an error let in a run and Howie (Six-Six) Schultz singled with the bases loaded for two more.

Nats Defeat Soldiers, 5-3, In Bond Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Sept. 9.—The Washington Senators bunched their hits here this afternoon to defeat the New Cumberland, Pa. Army Reception nine, 5-3 before 3000 fans who jammed McCurdy Field.

The exhibition, opening the third war loan drive in Frederick County, produced war bonds receipts of $281,737, Richard Bowlus, general chairman, announced. The game was sponsored by the Frederick Junior Chamber of Commerce and the County War Bond Committee.

Tommy Hughes, former pitcher of the Phillies, who went the first five innings for the Army, was hit rather freely and was accorded shoddy support by his teammates. Alex Kampouris, playing first base for Washington in the absence of Jim Vernon, got an inside-the-park home run in the second inning when Elmer Valo, former outfielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, misjudged his liner. It rolled to the right-field fence, 506 feet away, and scored Gerry Priddy, who had walked.

The Senators picked up two more tallies in the third off Hughes on singles by Jake Powell and Jake Early, and a double by Sherry Robertson. Their last counter came in the fifth when George Case walked, stole second and went to third when Peterman's throw went into centerfield. He scored on Powell's fly.

Paul Minner, a 20-year-old southpaw with the New York Giants prior to being inducted into the Army, whitewashed Washington during the final four innings. New Cumberland broke into the scoring in the third when Hughes beat out an infield hit, advanced to third on Harig's single and scored on an infield out. In the fourth Rhawn singled to center, went to third as Spence threw wild through the infield and counted when Harry Marne grounded to short.

The Army nine made its only threat in the seventh when Vernon Curtis, Senator relief hurler, walked Minner and Harig and Myers rapped a double into right center. Spence's peg to the plate nabbed Harig and ended the rally.

The game was launched by Mayor Hugh V. Gittinger, who tossed out the first ball. Music was provided by the Seventh Battalion Band of the Maryland State Guard.

Borowy Easy Victor, 11-3; Gives 8 Hits

Dickey's Four Hits Top Yanks' 15-Hit Assault on Bosox's Newsome and Ryba

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 9.—The New York Yankees steamrolled the Boston Red Sox today, 11 to 3, with a 15-hit assault that enabled Hank Borowy to coast to his eleventh victory with an eight-hit pitching performance.

The Bronx Bombers concentrated their shelling against Heber (Dick) Newsome and Mike Ryba with clusters of three runs in the second and fifth innings and five runs in the sixth.

Bill Dickey led the Yankee offensive with four successive hits that drove in three runs. Joe Gordon also drove in three runs on a double with the bases loaded in the sixth and Borowy himself collected a double and a single, driving in two runs.

Out of the whole frolic only the slump-ridden Nick Etten failed to get a hit.

Borowy got into trouble just twice, in the third and fourth innings, when he gave four walks and five hits to permit all the Red Sox scoring.

Nats and Macks Open Four-Game Series at Philly

The Nats move on to Philadelphia today for a night game with the Athletics, opening a four-game series that bulks as important in the Washington club's drive to finish in second place.

Manager Ossie Bluege has all of his 10 pitchers well rested and available for the series with the A's and indicated yesterday that he would send Dutch Leonard, Johnny Niggeling, Buck Newsom and Early Wynn to the mound in that order in the four games.

The series ends with a doubleheader on Sunday following single games tonight and tomorrow afternoon.

Softball Twin Bill On Stadium Card

Softball fans will have a two-fold reason to see tonight's doubleheader at the Washington Softball Stadium on Bladensburg rd. at New York ave. They should see two good games with Kavakos Grill battling Engineer Research Corp. and Gavin's Grill tackling the Alexandria Eagles. In addition, proceeds of the games will go toward expenses of sending the champion Garvins' club to Detroit for the national finals.

Spears Prepares For Squad Battle

Head Coach Dr. Clarence Spears spent yesterday's practice session grooming his Maryland U varsity football candidates for an intra-squad game Saturday, the first of the season.

The contest is expected to cast considerable light on this year's first string Old Line ensemble.

In scrimmage last night Chuck Schornhair, freshman fullback from Racine, Wis., stood out as a prime candidate for that spot.

Joe Makar, freshman quarterback from Mount St. Joseph's, Baltimore, returned after a week's layoff due to a bad ankle. He is not expected to see any heavy work until next week.

Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C. Sept. 9 (AP).—Second Lieut. Marvin Bell of Milwaukee, former Marquette University head scout and end coach, will serve as head coach of the Camp Lejeune Marine Corps football team, Capt. Arthur A. Nelson, camp recreation officer, announced today.

Reds Find Rookie Prospects Won't Fill Needs

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 9.—What Cincinnati's favorite ball club needs the mostest of for next year is outfielders who can hit, run, and field, and every single one of the good rookie prospects is either an infielder or a pitcher.

The Reds' front office, noting that of the outfield incumbents only Eric Tipton is hitting near .300, thinks that a good .350 man settle for .325 in these hard times—would be a boon.

So the Graybeards look to Roland Van Harrington, who's only hitting .250 but has stolen 45 bases for Syracuse in the international and is regarded as one of the better possibilities for next year. He plays second base. So does and so will Lonnie Frey.

They look upon Johnny G ld stein and Chuck Aleno, both coming up from Birmingham with good reports. Lonnie plays first base and so does Frank McCormick. Aleno plays third and so does Steve Mesta.

Others of the boys from Syracuse include Hank Sauer, always a pretty fair country hitter even though curves had him baffled on his first chance with the Reds, and also a first baseman. He tried the outfield when the Reds had him up before and it could not be said that he sparkled.

A hatful of pitchers is due for a try from the same place, including Tommy De La Cruz, a 19-game winner; Otto Carter and Mike Schultz, both southpaws, and Millard Howell and Bob Malloy. But pitching is not one of the Reds' urgent needs now.

10-Day Race Meet at Cumberland Approved by Commission

Oval Granted Sept. 22 to Oct. 2 Dates

Marlboro Hopes To Stage Meeting Following 30-Day Pimlico Session

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 9.—The Maryland Racing Commission approved today a 10-day fall race meeting at the Fairgo Track near Cumberland.

Chairman Frank Small, jr., of the racing commission said the Cumberland Fair Association's application for the racing days from September 22 through October 2 had been approved by the commission following a meting with officials of the Cumberland Association yesterday.

President Clifford White of the Cumberland Association and Representative J. Glen Beall (Republican) of Maryland appeared before the commission at yesterday's meeting, but a decision on the application was withheld until today.

The commission had previously rejected an application from the association for dates, at the same time it turned down petitions from Bel Air and Marlboro, which like Cumberland are half-mile ovals.

Marlboro Seeks Dates

Commission officials said today they also had received a new application for racing dates from Marlboro, but they added that no decision had been reached. The Marlboro application seeks permission to hold a meeting after the four major Maryland tracks' meeting at Pimlico, which runs from October 9 to November 13.

No new application has been filed on behalf of Bel Air, a commission spokesman said.

Commission approval of the Cumberland meeting will raise to 40 days the amount of racing to be conducted in the State this fall. The mile tracks—Pimlico, Bowie, Laurel and Havre de Grace—will conduct a joint 30-day meeting at the Pimlico oval in Baltimore.

White, in his appearance before the commission, said that he and his colleagues expected a successful meeting at the Allegany County track if dates were approved.

Would Raise Purses

"The first day's card will be drawn up with $500 and $600 purses offered horsemen," he said. "However, if the crowd is up to expectations on opening day, the purses will be boosted to $600 and $700 for the remainder of the meeting. On both Saturdays we will offer $1000 features."

Only one of the State's half-mile tracks has previously staged a meeting this year. Hagerstown, which is located within the city limits and was not seriously hampered by transportation problems, held a banner 10-day meeting during July.

The Cumberland oval is within a few miles of the city, while Bel Air and Marlboro are well removed from main centers of population. Timonium, the fifth half-mile track, has been taken over by the Army for the duration of the war.

The Cumberland track in the past has customarily held its 10 days of racing in July.

Analytical Eyes of Connie Mack Stamp Bill Johnson as 'Rookie of the Year'

Veteran Manager Picks Yankee Player Over Tiger Dick Wakefield

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—Connie Mack, the great dissenter, disagrees with the majority of fans, players and experts that Detroit's Dick Wakefield is the No. 1 American League rookie of the waning season—he likes the Yankee's Bill Johnson.

"That fellow Johnson is quite a player," says the Philadelphia Athletics' 80-year-old manager.

"On looking at the runs-batted-in column, you will notice that Wakefield's name is not among the leaders. But right in third position Johnson's name appears.

"Very few young infielders have come up in their first year and displayed the same power to drive in runs as has Johnson. I'm not sure, but I'd be willing to say he's produced as many runs in his first season as any third baseman in the league contributed in his first season."

A check showed that Ken Keltner of Cleveland produced 113 in his first year, 1938, to lead the first year records of the current crop. Johnson's record stood at 87 before today's game and he had about 25 games left to play. His batting average was .295.

"Wakefield," says Connie, "is a good outfielder and has showed he can hit, but I wouldn't go so far as some in saying he's well on his way to becoming a second Ted Williams. Pitchers can fool Wakefield, but they had a difficult time trying to outsmart Williams, and they don't fool Johnson to any extent. You can't outsmart him."

"Johnson's record becomes more significant when one figures Joe Gordon has been having an off year and his production of runs has suffered. Because this young fellow at third was able to take up the slack, the Yankees' attack has not suffered."

56 Compete In Corby Cup Tourney Today

The Corby Cup Tournament, for years an outstanding late-summer tournament on the District Women's Golf Association schedule, will be played today at Columbia Country Club with a field of 56 competing, one of the season's largest.

Although the cup itself is for the low net scorer, the competition for low gross will be keen as virtually all of the low handicapped players left in the city have entered, including the 15-year-old challenger from Kenwood, Jane Nelson, whose temperament cost her a prize in her debut two weeks ago.

Today is also the entry closing deadline for the Class B CBS Tournament which will be played next Tuesday at Washington Golf and Country Club for those with handicaps of 19 through 36. Today's event is for the players with allowances of scratch through 18. Play starts from the first tee today at 8:45 and continues through 11 a. m.

Villar, Lane Clash Monday

A couple of heavyweights yesterday were injected into the fistic proceedings for next Monday night's boxing show at Griffith Stadium. Larry Lane, the 190-pound Trenton scrapper, who held big Al Hart to a draw several months ago, was matched against Claudio Villar, the towering Spaniard, for a 10-round bout.

Already closed out is a 10-rounder between a pair of undefeated welterweights—Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, and Eddie Kane, the local lad who has won 18 straight pro battles.

20 Boys Compete In Base-Running Finals Tuesday

Twenty boys qualified for the finals of the base-running competition yesterday at Griffith Stadium. The championships will be staged at the park Tuesday night at 8 o'clock as a preliminary to the Nats and Red Sox game. George Case, Nats' speedy outfielder, will be timed on a dash around the sacks. The Touchdown Club, cosponsor of the event with President Clark Griffith, will give a $50 war bond to each first-place winner, a $25 bond to each second and $12.50 in war saving stamps to each third. The competition is being conducted by the Boys Club of Washington. Yesterday's semi-finals follow:

90-pound class—First, Marius Prince, 17.6 seconds; second, Richard Allenstein, 16; third, tie Billy Kalas, James Halber, 18.1; fifth, Herbie Rubenstein, 18.2.

100-pound class—First, George Sams, 16.8; second, Clarence Hale, 16.9; third, Freddie Sparks, 17; fourth, Buddy Blocker, 17.1; fifth, Horace Cascio, 17.4.

120-pound class—First, Russell Dowlins, 15.7; second, Malcolm McCann, 16.2; Al Brady, 16.3; fourth, Craig Stone, 16.4; fifth, Richard Bauman, 16.6.

Softball Champions Honored by Holland

Garvin's Grill and the Washington All-Stars girls were presented with trophies emblematic of their winning the District Softball Association titles last night by Dan Holland, general manager of the local Coca Cola company. The players were his guests at the beverage plant. Garvin's in addition to the D. C. title, won the regional crown at Baltimore and will play in the national finals at Detroit.

Fish, in Great Numbers, Keep Away From Writers' Lines

By Tom Moore McBride
Post Fishing Editor

Parking four-leaf clovers atop their respective ears and shoving their favorite horseshoe up Walter Haight's shirt to a point around his neck where it could be carried easily, intrepid members of the sports department of The Washington Post sallied forth on another fishing trip yesterday.

Capt. Dewey Parkinson was as optimistic as a Colonial Beach fishing captain ever is when the department arrived there a little before sunrise.

"Yeah," he said, "we ought to catch 'em today. Been doin' pretty good all week at dawn and sunset."

But Captain Parkinson hadn't reckoned with his four-fold hoodoo, The Post sports department. It was just like the time the sports department fished around Sharp's Island in the Chesapeake and ruined the fishing that had been good for two weeks prior to that date. There were three rockfish caught, two of them by yr. obdt. servt. and one by Jack Norris, Post military writer who mistakenly got tangled up with a sports department fishing trip.

There was one consolation: the fact that Clarence Nixon, the sports editor, who caught the only two fish boated on the last trip and crowed about it insufferably, caught none.

But don't let this column scare you away from Colonial Beach or any other fishing spot. The fish are there when you can catch them feeding, and some very good catches of rockfish have been reported from the lower Potomac, near the mouth of the Paruxant and in Herring Bay during the last week.

Millponds always have held a certain fascination for this column, and though the pool below the falls at Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park isn't quite a millpond, it is close enough to one to have the millpond lure.

Old Isaak Walton was a lover of millponds and said, we seem to recall, that the fattest and the most succulent carp come from the millponds. Well, we don't share the gentle old fisherman's love for carp, despite the Government's attempts to popularize it as a food fish during the meat shortage, but we do look back with a great deal of pleasure to some of the days we spent lying on a flat rock at the top of the falls and watching the scores of eels swimming about below.

And that's what all of this was getting at—eels. If the eels are still there they should afford someone with a light flyrod a bit of sport. Maybe they aren't there now. And perhaps if they are they won't take just any old worm offering, though eels are the most onniverous of fish, but in these days of rationed gasoline anything within walking distance that may afford fishing seems worth a try. In the event we don't get around to it, and you do, give us a ring and say what happened.

Reel angles: Fishermen can do something for the boys in the service and for the whole sport of fishing by contributing $2 to the International Game Fish Association's fishing kits for servicemen's drive . . . the Association can't supply enough tackle to dent the overall demand; that's why it is appealing to the public to help the brother anglers overseas . . . Checks go to Michael Lerner, International Game Fish Association, Museum of Natural History, Central Park West at 79th st., New York City . . . It's been a swell summer for hardheads, but they seem to be moving out of the lower river and the old familiar points about the Bay for wherever the hell they go this time of year . . . the perch are coming in thickly, though, and there should be rockfishing enough to keep most people happy . . . and maybe those bluefish are still on their way . . .

D. C. Horses In Baltimore Show Today

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 9.—Maryland's first all-hunter show will be held tomorrow and Saturday at Pimlico with gate receipts earmarked for the Baltimore Council of the Navy League, which operates a canteen, lounge and dormitory for men of the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard.

Sponsors of the event announced that the show will be held annually for the benefit of some charitable or service organization.

Dr. J. Wesley Edel is president of the parent organization, the First Annual Maryland Hunter Show, Inc.

Entries from the Washington area include Capt. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay's formidable trio, No Mistake, Smacko and Applejack; Pvt. Bobby Lee's Bonne Fille, Anne Hagner's Recruit, Jackie Warren's Yankee Doodle, Mr. and Mrs. George Mueller's imported gelding, Ballela; Anita Mammele's open jumping threat, Caddy's Trump, and Angelina Carabelli's Our Day.

From Virginia will come Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's brilliant Cornish Hills, considered by horsemen as the finest conformation horse of the decade, who is expected to romp off with top hunter honors.

A total of 160 horses will compete in the two-day outing, with lead-in and green classes emphasized tomorrow and open jumping and hunter events on the porgram Saturday, winding up with two championships.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

New Promotion Plan For U. S. Employes

A new promotion plan for Federal employes is in the works. It'll be announced momentarily. Briefly, it'll provide: That Government employes receiving up to and including $2000 a year will be eligible for a grade promotion within 30 days after appointment; that employes whose salaries are between $2000 and $2600 must wait at least 90 days before they can get a grade promotion; those who are paid above $2600 will have to wait a minimum of six months before they can get a grade promotion that'll involve an increase up to $600, and employes will have to stay a year in their jobs before they can be promoted to jobs that will bring about raises of $600 or more.

KLUTTZ

The pending Civil Service order, however, will provide that exceptions can be made but the commission must first approve the special cases. Personnal directors now have the authority to grant the promotions and the commission post audits them. The new order foreshadows a tighter promotion policy for higher-bracket personnel while the way will be opened to give low-paid employes a break. The commission, it's reported, will grant exceptions to its new policy only when it's convinced that the employe involved would have ranked near the top on an open competitive exam for the job.

Whn Aubrey Williams resigned as head of National Youth Administration the President told him he would be recalled to Federal service. Meantime, he has applied for an Army commission and he hopes to be assigned to AMG . . . Former Representative Luther Patrick plans to resign his consultant job at War Production Board to re-enter politics in Alabama . . . Ensign Helen Perry of the WAVES, is the Olympic backstroke swim champ. She's assigned to the Bureau of Ordnance . . . Representative Howard Smith of Virginia, has his congressional investigating committee at work on the Office of Price Administration. He believes that OPA sidestepped Congress' antiprofessor rider and that more college profs should be replaced in the price organization. However, Comptroller General Lindsey Warren, who interprets the laws laid down by Congress, advised OPA on which professors had to be replaced.

"The war goin' to be over
When the last shot is fired
And that'll be the day
When we all get fired."

But I'll bet the song is wrong and that it'll be a long time after the war before all the WPB employes get fired. Plans already have been drawn to give WPB a vital postwar job of administering the conversion of industry from war to peace. Ernest Kanzler, former associate of Henry Ford, and other bigshot industrialists have been working on the blueprint and they say, it's reported, that a WPB in some form will be necessary to do the job. Another postwar blueprint calls for the consolidation of OPA, Office of Defense Transportation, Petroleum Administration for War, and War Food with WPB so the peacetime conversion can be administered from a single agency.

A very prominent Republican is hopping mad over the many stories that are being told to embarrass Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information. First, he says the smear stories aren't true, and second, he strongly suspects that they are being inspired by an official in the Republican Natinoal Committee . . . If Internal Revenue Boss Guy T. Helvering gets that Federal judgship in Kansas—which he has good reason to expect—Harold Graves, the new assistant commissioner, will be the choice of Treasury Secretary for the job. But Graves is an able career man and not a politico and the job has been a political plum since it was created.

Several valid criticisms were made about my comments yesterday on "political pressure" that is being exerted by members of Congress on retrenching Federal agencies to keep their right-voting constituents on the payroll. A number of employes pointed out that they had been forced to seek the help of their Congressmen after they had been fired. These were veterans and permanent employes but still their personnel offices wouldn't listen to their cases and they can't be blamed for putting the pressure on from Capitol Hill. Agencies invite political intervention when they stupidly refuse to correct mistakes. There's little excuse in making them in the first place. Other employes who have been fired have sought relief from the Civil Service Commission.

65,000 Visitors See War Show Opened

Third War Loan Drive at tonight's action show to be preceded by Raymond Clapper for the afternoon performance at 2:30 p. m.

Thousands crowded into the grandstands, with every section overflowing long before the official opening of the arena and stage show at 2:30 p. m.

Morning, afternoon and evening, thousands more covered all available space between the grandstands and the Monument, and additional thousands streamed through the three entrances to the vast display of America's armed might in the "Back the Attack" area.

Ordnance crews from the "Back the Attack" task force seated themselves on the barrel of the "Long Tom," the huge 240-mm. howitzer and the 155's which was a part of the ordnance exhibit on the hilltop far to the south of the arena, in order to see the stirring spectacle of infantry, cavalry, tank corps and the rest charging through their acts.

Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, was the first speaker for the third war loan drive.

In introducing him before the thousands in the packed grandstand sections, Louis Brott, Station WINX announcer, who acted as master of ceremonies, said:

"It is largely through Mr. Meyer and the efforts of The Washington Post, that this show is here today."

"Means Sacrifice"

". . . This campaign," Meyer said, "aims to raise the greatest amount of money from individuals that any drive has raised in the history of the world. Every person who possibly can do so will be asked to buy at least $100 more than his usual purchases in war bonds during the 15-billion-dollar drive beginning today. That means sacrifice. . . .

"Our quota here in the District of Columbia is 94 million dollars, an unprecedented sum for Washington.

"But when we remember that some 30,000 of our young men and women are in the armed services—two full divisions of our sons and daughters—it is something that simply has got to be done.

"It is my hope that every man, woman and child in the District of Columbia and the surrounding countryside will be able to see this great exposition. It will do your heart good to know that your son has the best that brains and money can furnish in hastening the day when we can again live in peace."

"Back the Attack" is sponsored by The Washington Post.

Half Million Expected

More than a half million persons will have seen the greatest assembly of ordnance armament, up-to-the-minute equipment and demonstrations ever attempted by the Army anywhere before.

It is the most realistic exhibition of the Arsenal of Democracy ever presented outside the theaters of action and shown at the request of the Treasury Department in connection with the Third War Loan Drive

Volunteer entertainers on the afternoon and night shows were Joyce Romero and Sylvia Kaplowitz and the 10 "Accordion-Ettes."

The great throng of "Back the Attack" visitors applauded lustily. Many of them were children who had arrived long before the noon whistle blew, hundreds coming from out of town in order to make certain of seeing the opening.

Theodore Gamble, War Finance Division national director for the Treasury Department from Portland, Oreg., at the 8:45 show again urged the thousands present to help raise the money for the third war loan.

It was Mary Churchill's first visit to Washington, she told a reporter. "This is tremendous," she said as she was shown the huge B-24 Liberator.

She was escorted about the "Back the Attack" grounds by Lieut. Loretta K. Ficks of the WACS.

Trimly clad in the uniform of the ATS, the British army branch of the service corresponding to the WACS, Miss Churchill said she was 20, nearly 21 years old."

She smiled and admitted it, when asked if she was the Miss Churchill who was spanked by a Yank soldier a year ago when she had said something about the soldier's No. 14 shoes.

Both Mrs. Churchill and her daughter stopped before an attractive quartermaster display of ham and eggs and other typical soldier rations. Urged to taste them, they did.

Secretary Morgenthau and his party, escorted on the grounds by Colonel McCabe, were plainly struck with the thoroughness and size of the exhibits.

"It is much greater than I had expected it would be," the Secretary said.

There was little confusion among the thousands of visitors. Military police, guides and aides were everywhere, courteous but firm in their direction to the many displays and the action shows.

Under the direction of Maj. John H. Galloway, the Public Relations Office was thoroughgoing in its attempt to aid the reporters and writers, photographers and newsreel men.

General Surles was on the grounds throughout the afternoon, and again at the special performance. Milling, good-natured crowds fanned out from the acres of massed displays on the "Back the Attack" ground.

Coffee and Doughnuts

They will leave shortly for overseas duty with the Red Cross.

For the first time in history guns were fired on the Monument Grounds yesterday. During the artillery demonstration for the afternoon action show in the arena a battery of 105-mm. howitzers fired one round for each of the four guns.

Guns again were fired at the night action show by both 105s and the 90-mm. antiaircraft battery as a part of the demonstrations.

Wounded Men See Show

The theme of "Back the Attack's" action show was not new to them. They were from Walter Reed Hospital — wounded convalescents, well enough to be down to watch the opening show.

There was admiration on their young, serious faces as they watched the grand entry . . . the finely drilled band playing "Something About a Soldier," the snap and precision of the Military Police exhibition detachment led by color guard, the jeeps, the cavalry, the tanks and tank destroyers and the artillery.

They were: Sergt. Robert R. Murphy, Pvt. Charles Titanic, Cpy. Robert W. Keener, Pvt. Charles D. Barker, Cpl. Terrell Rogers, Pvt. Harold Erb, Pvt. Herbert Shimp, Pvt. Carl Oakley.

Noon, Grounds open. All exhibits.
2:30 Parade in the arena.
2:37 Close order drill.
2:47 Treasury Department.
3:07 Jeep jamboree.
3:10 Dogs of war.
3:18 Jeep comedy demonstration.
3:23 Demonstration, Signal Corps, Engineers, Medicos.
3:31 Finale, "Star-Spangled Banner."
4:45 Guard mount, White House Military Police Guard.

8:52 Close order drill.
8:57 Jeep jamboree.
9:00 Cavalry detachment.
9:05 Antiaircraft demonstration.
9:12 Jeep comedy demonstration.
9:17 Flame-thrower demonstration.
9:18 Treasury Department.
9:33 Demonstration, 8 minutes.
9:41 Chaplain scene, 2 minutes.
9:43 Bugler, 1 minute.
9:44 Finale, "Star-Spangled Banner."

'Back the Attack' Free to the Public

"Back the Attack" is free to the public.

There will be three big action shows daily in the arena. Seats are available at these shows for 6000 persons.

At the matinee performances at 2:30 p. m. each day 1000 of these seats will be reserved for school children. The remaining 5000 seats at the 2:30 matinees will be open to the public on a first come, first served basis.

At the 4:45 p. m. "retreat" programs all seats will be open to the public, also first come, first served.

Seats for the evening performances, at 8:45 each night, go to bond buyers. Of the 6000 seats 3000 will go to Federal agencies for bond purchases from Treasury Minute Men. Another 2500 will be distributed to bond buyers who purchase their bonds from banks, postoffices, in department stores, from bond booths—wherever bonds are sold. The remaining 500 will be distributed at the direction of the D. C. war finance committee to organizations and salesmen who have completed their bond quotas.

Those who get seat tickets for the evening performance must use them on the date stamped. They must also be in their seats by 8:45 p. m., after which time all vacant seats will be thrown open to the public.

Million-Dollar Purchase Aids D. C. Third War Loan Drive

The District of Columbia Third War Loan drive got off to a flying start yesterday with the sale of one million dollars worth of certificates of indebtedness to one buyer as sales of the Series E bonds to the man-in-the-street was brought nearer to a successful conclusion by plans of Washington luncheon clubs.

The International Harvester Co., through Robert M. Eaves, assistant to the vice president, yesterday handed his company's check for one million to John A. Reilly, District chairman, and is to receive the securities certificates in return. The purchase represented one ninety-fourth of the entire District's goal of 94 million.

To Subscribe 39 Millions

Eaves said, as he handed Reilly the check, that "in backing the Third War Loan campaign, International Harvester and its affiliated companies will subscribe approximately 39 million dollars in war bond purchases throughout the country.

"This is an increase of 35 per cent over the company's Second War Loan purchases.

"The people of the District of Columbia should be proud of the 94-million-dollar quota they have set for themselves for the campaign. It is a real pleasure for the International Harvester Co. to contribute to the local campaign."

The Kiwanis Luncheon Club has appointed William F. Nelson, general chairman of its drive committee. He is assisted by Maurice Palmer, Robert Meehan and Robert Kiffey, called "coaches." Eight teams are in the field, with 12 members to the team. The club's goal is a million and a half dollars. First reports will be made at the luncheon meeting Thursday to be held in the Mayflower Hotel.

The Rotary Club is equally enthusiastic. Wilson M. Nairn has been named general chairman and assisting him is an advisory committee composed of Arthur May, Robert B. Swope, Philip M. Talbott, Robert Fleming, Ward Stringham and Richard W. Hynson.

Twenty-five "hosts" have been appointed and each has been assigned a table at the weekly luncheons during the drive. First reports will be made at Wednesday's luncheon at the Williard Hotel, it was announced.

Lions Plan Program

The Lions Club has an energetic program, details of which are to be announced soon, according to Jules Ricker. Other clubs are behind the drive, according to the District Committee.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue, one of the largest bureaus in Washington, yesterday launched its part in the campaign with the sale of three $1000 bonds.

The first was sold to Commissioner Guy T. Helvering and the others went to Miss Leone Bruch, special assistant to Helvering, and to Miss Molly A. Wiseman, veteran employe of the bureau.

Harold N. Graves, assistant commissioner, sold the bond to Helvering. He is chairman of the bureau's bond committee. Assisting Graves are George C. Billard and Joseph S. Cochran, J. P. Drach, Ruth Nicholson, Edna Seidebspinner, Catherine M. Judy, Sarah Powers, Dorothy Grady, Catherine Galloway, Jean Montgomery, Kathleen Cherheim and Lucille Butler.

Banks, stores with bond booths and canvassers reported enthusiastic reception. Yesterday, being the initial day of the drive, reports were not available. But first information on results will be known late today, Reilly said. Reason for the seeming delay is because all sales must pass through the Federal Reserve and be confirmed—with cash.

Today's employe rallies include a get-together at the plant of the Washington Gas Light Co., and a rally of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., at which the firm's network public address system will carry talks to all parts of the company's operations system. C. A. Robinson, vice president and general manager, and Maj. Elbert S. Maloney, former telephone company employe, who has directed communication operations in various war theaters, will speak.

Yesterday's rallies included "kick-off" luncheons by the Kiwanis and the Cosmopolitan Clubs; a meeting of the Washington Gas Light Co., a rally of the Young Men's Shop and a gathering at Goldenberg's.

Morton employes met just before noon and the employes of the General Electric Co. heard speakers in support of the drive last evening.

Quiz Kid Bond Show Seats Nearly All Sold

All of the $100 and less seats for the performance of the Quiz Kids in Constitution Hall September 19 at 7:30 p. m., when they present their national radio program, have been sold, it was announced last night There are a few $10,000 bond seats still for sale.

The total admission "price" to the show is about 3½ million dollars. Seats were obtainable from local stores who are sponsoring their visit here. Those desiring a seat would buy a bond in one of the stores and would receive, in addition to the bonds, an exchange ticket.

The ticket was to be taken to Cappel's Concert Bureau, in Ballard's, at 1340 G st. nw., where regular broadcast tickets would be exchanged for the store's ticket.

The $100 and cheaper seats represented three-fourths of the total.

The local stores which make the visit of the Quiz Kids possible are Julius Garfinckel & Co., Goldenberg's, The Hecht Co., Jelieff's, S. Kann Sons Co., Lansburgh & Bro., the Palais Royal, Raleigh Haberdasher, Sears, Roebuck & o. and Woodward & Lothrop.

Mrs. Churchill Among Crowd At Army Show

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

They came — 30,000 Washingtonians to witness the first showing yesterday of the "Back the Attack" show of Army weapons and material on the Monument Grounds. They saw—the greatest aggregation of tanks and guns and aircraft ever assembled. They purchased—more war bonds than even the War Finance Committee could estimate.

Among those 30,000 were many distinguished guests, but none more notable than Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the British Prime Minister, and their daughter, Subaltern Mary Churchill of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, who arrived shortly after noon to cover the entire 20 acres of the show.

At the area housing the silent messengers of the Signal Corps—500 carrier pigeons, capable of carrying vital communiques when radios must be silenced—Mrs. Churchill and her khaki-clad daughter experienced an unusual thrill in military affairs as they were permitted to pick up one of the Army's prize pigeons.

Youthful Subaltern (equivalent to a WAC lieutenant) Churchill clung tightly to the flapping bird until her mother, observing its struggles, protested, "Mary, the pigeon is going to faint!"

In WAC headquarters, the British visitors sampled Army mess, found it "excellent" and even tried on a WAC's tunic. The entire show they pronounced "tremendously interesting"—from the giant Liberator in the Air Forces exhibit to rifles in the Ordnance exhibit.

Visitors to the widespread exhibits also saw 20 WACS acting as models for the uniforms of their corps—fatigue, field, dress. And in the ordnance exhibit several members of the WAC have become so proficient in handling small arms that they are able to "field strip" the Army's famous Garand rifle, known as the M-1, blindfolded in 1 minute 55 seconds—excellent time even for an expert enlisted man.

Not all of the feminine participants in "Back the Attack" are in the armed forces. A handful of civilians, employes of the Middletown (Pa.) Air Depot, are busy dissembling and rebuilding a P-40 and a P-47—just so that the time spent on the Monument Grounds will not be chalked up as worthless to the war effort.

U. S. Attorney's Brief Defends OPA Validity

The Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 was defended yesterday as being within the war powers of Congress, the United States Attorney's office said in an answer to charges in District Court of attorneys for Ralph P. Counselman, local meat slaughterer, that the OPA should be declared unconstitutional on several of the grounds that invalidated the National Industrial Recovery Act.

This is the first local test of the OPA and comes in a fight to quash the indictment against the meat firm which is located at 431 11th st. sw. The indictment, contained in 40 counts, charge false meat grading and price-ceiling violations of $2500 in the sale of about 50,000 pounds of veal.

In answer to the charge that Congress has unconstitutionally delegated broad powers to the OPA, the answer states that it has been clearly established that in wartime Congress may intervene in many diverse fields that it could not enter in periods when there was no emergency.

The OPA has adequate standards to work out the purpose of Congress with exactness and equitableness, the Government contends.

Five charges of violations of OPA ceiling price regulations in the sale of meat and poultry were placed in Municipal Court yesterday against P. F. Casey, operator of a stand in the Arcade Market, at 14th and Park rd. nw.

Casey had been charged previously on August 11. All the cases were continued by Judge Nathan Margold until October 5.

The new charges follow:

Sale of 2 pounds 3 ounces of top sirloin for $1.24 on July 20 to Viola Warren, 1333 Park rd. nw.

Sale of 1¾ pounds of sirloin for $1.25 on May 20 to Louis Wisner, 90 Webster st. ne.

Sale of 5½-pound leg lamb for $2.89 on July 9 to Sharon W. Reed, 6100 14th st. nw.

NCHA Finds Homes for 99 Families

Groups Were Evicted To Make Way for New Bolling Field Military Road

New homes for 99 of the 112 Negro families to be evicted by construction of the military highway from Bolling Field to Camp Springs, Md., have been assured by the National Capital Housing Authority, and the other 13 families have located new quarters "on their own hook," John Ihlder, executive officer of NCHA, said yesterday.

Because they are being evicted by the War Department, the families will be allowed to occupy housing projects constructed for in-migrant war workers, Ihlder said.

Twenty-two of the families will be put in the Nichols Avenue Project, and the other 77 will be divided among the Barry Farm Dwellings Project, Anthony Bowen Houses and Parkside Dwellings.

All of the units have not been completed, Ihlder said.

"The families have been ordered to move out the last of the month, and in case we don't have the new places completed by then we'll ask the War Department to hold off a week or two," he said.

Some of the warworker families for which the project houses had been constructed must now wait until the first of next year when 740 more NCHA Negro units will be completed, Ihlder said.

Girl's $1500 Starts Bond Sale at Show

First purchaser of war bonds at the "Back the Attack" show yesterday was 17-year-old Margaret Tribby, who appeared at the bond window just inside the Monument Grounds promptly at noon with a check for $1500, to sign applications for $2000 worth of bonds.

Margaret, a junior at Mount Vernon Seminary, received the money as a gift from her father, Charles E. Tribby, 4419 Argyle ter. nw., who accompanied her.

A member of an entertainment group called the Accordionettes, Margaret returned a few hours later to play in the show. The unit has toured all nearby Army camps and naval installations, including Fort Meade, Fort Belvoir, the Naval Hospital and Quantico Marine Base.

Just after photographers recorded Miss Tribby's visit to the booth, three little girls appeared and asked a reporter shyly: "Please, have they begun selling bonds yet?"

Mrs. E. M. McPeak, chairman of special events for the women's division of the District War Finance Committee, sent a volunteer to help them. The two older children, greenbacks clutched tightly, murmured that they wanted to buy bonds, and they turned out to be the American-born children of an Italian couple, Mr. and Mrs. Carmelo Mattia, 609 Morton st. nw., who gave them the money for their bond purchases to celebrate the capitulation of Italy.

The second "Back the Attack" bond thus went to Antoinette Mattia, 12, and the third to her sister, June, 15. Little Jenny, 11, made no purchase because she had received her own war bond as a birthday gift several weeks ago.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Mattia were born in Italy and came to this country in their teens, the children said. And, they added, as they proudly clasped their bonds, everyone at the Mattia house was thrilled over Italy's surrender.

USO to Offer 2d Anniversary Dance Tomorrow; 1000 Invited

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will slice a huge birthday cake for 1000 servicemen and women warworkers who have been invited to a formal dance at the YWCA's USO Club, 17th and K sts. nw., tomorrow at 9 p. m., in celebration of the club's second anniversary.

Planned to be held on three floors, the dance will continue until midnight and will be highlighted by a variety show. USO officials will be present to greet the guests.

In continuation of the birthday celebration, open house will be at the club Sunday, 3 to 11 p. m.

Flowers for Wounded

Flowers for wounded servicemen now at Walter Reed Hospital and the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, are being asked from Washingtonians by Flowers for Cheer, society devoted to collecting flowers for hospital patients. Most of these men have no friends or family in this community, it was said.

Local garden clubs and those having their own gardens should send flowers to the Gray Ladies Division of the Red Cross at each hospital, the organization announced.

Street Dance Tomorrow

A street dance for servicemen and women will be staged tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. in Post Square in front of the District Building. Sponsored by Servicemen's Club, 1306 9th st. nw., the dance will be complimented by vaudeville acts provided by Volunteer Camp Shows of the District Recreation Department and Recreation Services, Inc.

An augmented orchestra of the Navy School of Music will play and Jimmy McGrath and Jack Lowe, both of Station WWDC, will serve as MC's

To Christen Vessel

City News In Brief

Two persons were fined and a third received a suspended sentence after they were found guilty in Municipal Court yesterday of violating blackout regulations in Monday's predawn air-raid test. All were charged with allowing lights to burn during the test

Matthias Dorsey of 1501 9th st. nw. was fined $3.

This brought to eight the number of persons charged with violations of the last blackout.

Devotions Open Today

An octave of devotion honoring Our Sorrowful Mother will be conducted at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, 8th and N sts. nw., today through Friday, September 17, by the Rev. Robert Sweeny, CSC, who will preach daily at 7:45 p. m.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Soldier's Wife Asks How to Cope With Marital Muddle, Caused by Disillusionment With Husband And Ardent New Attachment Formed for Old Beau

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You will probably say that I am very childish or very fickle, but I fear it is more than that. I shall go back to the beginning. While attending a very small college in a small town, I met a very grand boy from the Middle West. We became very fond of each other; and after graduation continued the friendship with occasional correspondence. During the next few years he made several trips to my home, for brief visits with my family and me. Then gradually our correspondence ceased; I don't know why.

When my family moved to Washington four years ago, I took a Government job. There I met a very nice boy, whom I shall call Tom. We started dating very often; although I had no other feeling than a very close friendship. Imagine my surprise when I learned Tom had matrimonial plans,—and took for granted that I felt the same! He finally became so serious that I fel I couldn't say "No,"—after dating him constantly and leading him on. Now, you can see just how "easy" I am. Always afraid of hurting someone. Two weeks after our marriage, it suddenly dawned on me that I cared nothing for him, except as a friend.

He had a talk with me, during which he told me that now, as his wife, I had to break all contacts with my former friends, take off "make-up," etc. He even told me what to wear. Funny, he had seemed to like the way I dressed before I became Mrs. Tom. I have never seen such a change in a person. But to get on with my story: Four months after our marriage, Tom was drafted. Previously, he had made me stop work, after I had been very independent with my own money. So, after he entered the Army, I had to go back to work. I made quite a success of my job and was offered a better position in another town. I jumped at the chance to be off.

She's Fretting Herself Into "Mental State"

While there, I resumed correspondence with my old college beau, who had become a naval officer. Nothing serious, I thought then; but when I came home to spend Christmas with the family, he (let's call him Dick) wired and asked if he might also spend the holidays with us, as he was so far away from his own family. We had a glorious time together and it suddenly dawned on both of us that it wasn't friendship any longer. It was love. Both of us realized what a terrible mistake I had made in marrying Tom, who, during this period, had left for overseas.

Tom writes every day, telling of his love for me. He has suddenly realized that I have become very lax about writing him. I do try to write cheerful letters, as though nothing had happened; but honestly, I don't know how much longer I can keep up the pretense. Tom has a violent temper and I am very much afraid of what he may do if he ever finds out. I hate hurting him, even though he has hurt me. The naval officer wants me to get a divorce when the war is over, but I don't feel that I should. By my terrible mistake, I have ruined two lives. Tom has only a high school education, but a lot of practical sense. The naval officer is very well educated, with beautiful manners, while Tom doesn't give a hang what anyone thinks of his manners.

Within the past two weeks, the naval officer has left for "parts unknown." And I am worrying myself into a mental state. I have mother almost insane with my hysterical moods. She understands what it is all about, and is as fond of Dick as if he were her son. My family were perfectly furious that I married someone like Tom. Even my sisters feel that I should definitely make the break from Tom; or I shall be a mental patient in some institution. Miss Haworth, I have no idea how to cope with this triangle. Can you offer any suggestions?

J. K.

Don't Complicate Issue That Centers on Husband

DEAR J. K.: It seems to me that you are unnecessarily complicating the problem created by your definitely mistaken marriage to Tom, by dragging Dick into the picture to smear yourself with unsavory implications of figurative or spiritual infidelity,—particularly in view of Tom's violently jealous temperament. (And it seems evident that you DID engineer Dick's mutually compromising return engagement, so to speak; since you say, "I renewed correspondence with him,"—because you were impressed by this old friend's elevation to the rank of naval officer, I gather!)

Inasmuch as you realized, two weeks after marriage, that you cared nothing for Tom except as a friend,—a crucial development that had, at that time, no conscious reference to Dick's past or potential future significance to you,—and inasmuch as Tom himself, within the first four months of marriage, had undergone a complete metamorphosis of personality for the worse, thus giving you painful, surprise justification for wanting to be relieved of the contract, on grounds of cruel incompatibility constituting a serious threat to your nervous health, you should exercise the discretion and integrity to keep the record of your wifely deportment very clean-cut, in order to give honest and weighty emphasis to that vital issue.

You stand to be penalized for failure to observe such a policy. And the more conspicuously you fail to observe it, as, for instance, in candidly wearing your heart on your sleeve for Dick,—after having deliberately rekindled the old flame with him, in Tom's enforced absence,—while showing progressive indifference to Tom, the more hell you can expect to pay, when the time comes, as inevitably it must, for a showdown with Tom, concerning the (shall we say?) irreparable internal collapse of your relationship with him.

Wife's Personal Vanity Is Clouding Perspective

By your "terrible" mistake, so you say, you have ruined two lives,—by which I presume you mean Dick's and Tom's. My advice is to beware of letting your vanity cloud your perspective; and to control your excitable tendency to indulge in sentimental heroics, in the unfortunate circumstances. As among the three of you, if anybody's life is in danger of being badly bent ("ruined" is too strong a word), by your too-complaisant blundering, that life is yours. Don't add to the mistakes you have already made by counting too heavily on Dick's vague talk of divorce and marriage to him after the war. That's what he said in a war-fever of emotional excitement, during his holiday flirtation with you,—and for all we know, he may be wishing now that he'd never said it; and wondering why he let himself get tangled in your marital crack-up; if, indeed, he is seriously thinking about it at all.

As matters stand, it seems to me the only sensible, honorable and permanently profitable thing you can do is: (1) stop playing with fire in re Dick, which means stop playing at being his sweetheart, which you are in no position to be; (2) deport yourself circumspectly and dutifully as Tom's wife, until his return; (3) if you can't pretend love for him in your letters, don't be guilty of labored insincerity. Just have the decent consideration and good sportsmanship to write him regularly, giving a cheerful resume of the doings-of-the-day on the home front,—which is your minimum duty as a soldier's wife; and from which status you cannot be free until after the war. And let him read what he will between the lines.

Best Deal Honestly, As "Duration Widow"

If he notes that love is lacking and that only casual friendship speaks through,—well, such is the truth he must face on his return. And while it would be knifing him in the back to urge that truth on him now, when he can't possibly come to grips with it, it is certainly no kindness to slyly deceive him with sugared hypocrisy, on the other hand. If he jealously heckles you about the neutral quality of your letters, tell him with simple sincerity that he must understand that both of you are going through a period of transition,—of character growth and personality changes, which must be expected, at your age;—and that if he doesn't like and isn't satisfied with your letters, you are truly sorry; but you think it is very important, as a matter of honest dealing, to write just as you feel,—and wouldn't it be much better if he waited until you can talk face to face, before trying seriously to decipher the eternal mystery of the feminine feelings?

CHARM CLINIC

By Collette

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Happily for most school children, they have gone through that trying period when every mouthful of food seems to be an effort to swallow, and now they will eat, without prodding or wheedling, almost anything put before them.

The problem today is to manage the kind of diet which will furnish ample nourishment for this now hungry child. It takes figuring and ingenuity to buy what one wants as well as what one can pay for.

Mrs. L. E. feels that her little daughter is not getting as much food as she needs. "She has always been a thin child and now weighs only 38 pounds at 6 years of age. She hates breakfast and all I can get her to eat is a flaked or puffed cereal, no milk or fruit juice.

"At noon she eats a sandwich and some fruit sauce and sometimes drinks a cup of cocoa. If I have cookies, she will eat those.

"At night she has what we have, usually a cheese or egg or fish dish when we do not have meat, vegetables and dessert. She likes dessert. Sometimes I can get her to drink a glass of milk.

"She seems well, is seldom sick, but looks thin compared to other children her age. How could I get her to eat more?"

Perhaps you can't get her to a much greater quantity, but will have to improve the nutritional content of the foods she now eats.

If you can make home-cooked cereals attractive to her there is more nourishment per tablespoon than in the flaked, puffed ready-cooked types. Put some milk in this cereal as it is cooking and add more at serving time, also a small teaspoon of butter along with the sugar.

Give her buttered toast and jelly and add the hot cup of cocoa to the morning meal.

Your noon lunch is all right and a good selection of sandwich materials will add variety to it. Offer some flavored milk drink and expect her to accept it.

Your night meal is good, too. Use enriched breads. Try imperceptibly to increase the amounts of the food at the right meal. Perhaps some brewer's yeast tablets or some other vitamin B product will stimulate her appetite helpfully.

My leaflet, "Meals for the School Child," may offer some ideas for the parent who is puzzling over diets. Send a 3 cent stamped self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Eldred, "Your Baby and Mine" Dept., in care of this newspaper.

Swedish Meat Substitute

Sweden has a new substitute for meat. It's a dry yeast made from cellulose and has been on trial in restaurants for the past several months. Reports claim that the "beefsteak" and other dishes prepared from it have been accepted by the public though they find it less tasty than real meat. The yeast is also being sold in the form of bouillon extract.

How to Please Men

There seems to be no rest ahead for women even in the bright, shiny new postwar world. Just as they were getting ready to settle down on their chaise longues while a host of mechanical robots did all their work and provided their entertainment, comes the word that they must embark on a bigger and better campaign of pleasing men.

"But," many will protest, "isn't that just the thing we have been hoping to rest up from? Haven't we been exhausting ourselves chasing to beauty parlors the last two decades? Haven't we dieted and starved and stood on our heads enough already? Haven't we spent enough of our time reading constantly in newspapers, magazines and every book we picked up how to make ourselves more fascinating to men? Haven't our whole lives been conditioned toward retaining our looks and figures and charm to hold husbands or to get them?"

Undoubtedly. But that's nothing in view of what lies ahead, according to Dr. George Gallup, survey specialist. Since the Census Bureau predicts that women sometime this year will come into the majority in numbers in the United States, Dr. Gallup, out of his surveys of hundreds of thousands of representative men in the last eight years, has assembled a composite picture of the average American man for the laboratory use of those who would cater to his likes and dislikes.

Want Intelligence—So They Say

With men becoming scarcer, women who are now mobilizing for the pursuit of their prey, will find the picture as presented by Dr. Gallup in the October Cosmopolitan Magazine definitely helpful. Taking physical attractiveness (and all the regime back of what) for granted, it seems there's still plenty to do to get your man. What the average man wants first in a woman, according to Dr. Gallup's findings, is good companionship. Does that mean boning up on hunting, fishing, prize fighting, wrestling, baseball, the financial page, accounting, manufacturing, etc? Does it mean tagging along on a 10-mile walk, ruining your shoes and gasping to keep up with your "good companion?" Does it mean any more than the 24-hour-a-day adjustment to his interests and whims that the "How to Be Fascinating" books have been preaching for the last decade?

What the average man wants second in a woman is intelligence, accordiing to Dr. Gallup. Does that mean—no, we will not go into that.

Further, the average man prefers a brunette. And that after most women had been devoting their lives to struggling for blonde locks or at least blonde personalities.

He also wants a family of three. What is more, he likes walking the floor with the baby! A fact well to remember!

Change Your Politics To Get Your Man

He wants unconditional surrender from the Axis. So husband hunters who are in favor of dealing with Hitler or even the Junker generals will have to change their principles. He likes baseball first. (Don't crowd, girls, getting to the sandlots.) He goes to a movie every 12 days. (Of course you'll have to pass up the jungle romances, as he'll prefer a historical movie in costume or a girl show.) If he is a Democrat he favors a fourth term. (If you've been playing around with the Southern Senators you'll have to change camps quickly.) If he's a Republican he's for Dewey, Willkie or MacArthur. (If you're for Bricker or Warren, drop them like hot potatoes!) Finally, Dr. Gallup adds the assuring information that the average American man is not a complex individual. As if any woman needed to be told that!

So there is outlined all the extra homework lying ahead for women who don't want to be numbered among the female majority of 100,000 that the Census Bureau says will exist annually from now on. But lest the job ahead seem too overpowering, there is one comforting thing to remember. Dr. Gallup's survey is based entirely on what men SAY they like and want in women. And, as any woman knows, the man who comes out flatly for an intelligent brunette who will sit beside him while he is fishing and bait his hook, may have a different idea when he encounters a nitwit blonde on the lookout for an ermine jacket. In support of that assurance, one has only to point to the fact that the typical male guinea pig in the survey told the Gallup investigators in all seriousness that he likes walking the floor with the baby!

COLLEGE GIRL BEAUTY HINTS

By Margaret George

There is no absolute definition of beauty. People the world over have very different ideas as to what constitutes female beauty. And a Ubangi tribesman wouldn't exchange his woolly-haired platter-mouth ideal for our American concept—not for all the jewels in the 5-and-10.

Be that as it may, the type of beauty that comes nearest to fulfilling the American ideal of feminine beauty is pretty well summed up by the college girl with shining hair and radiant complexion. It's a natural kind of beauty, that most Americans admire, which has its base in cleanliness and health. And if the truth be told, most of our cosmetics are designed to achieve that effect.

That's why heavy make-up and all kinds of cosmetic artifices are slightly silly on the teen-age girl. Probably the most important cosmetic in any college girl's kit is a cake of soap.

Skin Care;

Of course, that's stripping it down to bare essentials. And few skins, no matter how young, can get by with just soap. A healthy young skin can get by with a cleansing cream and a good cold cream. Occasionally, a mild skin lotion is in order.

Nature being so, teen-age and blemishes very often go hand in hand. And if there's anything more effective than a blotched skin in producing an inferiority complex, we don't know about it. If your skin is chronically blemished, it's best to see a doctor who may be able to prescribe a diet or medication, rather than messing around with beauty aids which may or may not help your case. But if it's an occasional condition, you may find that the blemished skin kit put out by one beautician for just such emergencies is the answer to your prayers.

It contains several preparations which are designed to both cure and conceal, including a masque treatment which works wonders, and an 8-hour cream which is very kind to sensitive skins. There's also a lotion which hides unlovely "spots" and speeds their departure. This is available at most cosmetic counters for around $5.

If you happen to have one of those persistently oily skins that soap and water doesn't seem to affect, you may find that the companion kit to the blemished skin kit, is exactly what you need. The lotions in this kit are the same as those used in the salon. This set is about $6.

Grooming

A good, stiff-bristled hair brush is a must in any woman's beauty wardrobe, not only in the college girl's. Weekly shampoos with a regular shampoo that will rinse out easily under the shower—and there are many on the market—are equally important. If you have dry, lackadaisical hair, you might like to try a soapless oil shampoon. There's a good one available for something over $1.

The same rules that apply to make-up on the face, go for nail grooming. Wild-hued polishes and long-pointed nails don't make sensible companions to books. There are lots of good, clear reds on the counters if you must have color, but stay away from purples and blood-reds.

Go without stockings if you want to, and if your legs are nicely tanned you can get away with it until the first snow flurries. But in any case, be sure these legs are smooth and spotless, and if they're lily-white, that's what they designed leg make-up for.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

We have heard of a famous career woman who is fighting a hard battle to stay young. The first thing she does every morning is rush to the mirror to see whether she looks a day older.

It would be more to the point if she would try a deep-knee bend, without shoes, feet parallel. If she could do that without creaking, it would be a much more accurate test. As a woman gets along her vision isn't so good. Besides (and somebody ought to tell her!) worry about growing old is one of the fastest ways of aging.

Keep your joints flexible and you will go right on feeling and looking young. There are a couple of kinds to work with. Part of you is on hinges, and the other moves on a ball-and-socket contraption like the shoulders and hips. And, for our purposes, there is the waistline. If you don't keep that flexible, you might as well give up.

All you have to do to keep from rusting out is put your joints through their full range of motion every day, and the tests that tell how limber you are can't be beaten for limbering up. The deep-knee bend may be a bit tough, so loosen up your knee joints with this one: Sit on a table and swing alternate legs back and forth, carefree and easy. Then do a double leg swing from side to side. Swing both legs in unison at the knees.

To free the hip joint, stand with one hand on a table and swing the opposite leg forward and backward from the joint. To get more action out of that ball-and-socket, circle the leg at the hip joint. Last, swing the leg straight out to the side. Do the same with the other leg.

For the arms, do a double arm swing, forward and backward, brushing the hands against the thighs each time. Then circle up and back at the shoulders, rolling the arms loosely at the shoulder joints.

Finish the arm work by bending the arms at the elbows, first straight out at sides, then in front, with hands resting on shoulders with each bend.

For your neck, move the head to the side. Keep the upper jaw pulled up to beautify the throat, turn the head, touch chin to shoulder, move head to front and then to other shoulder.

Memo to Miss Brown

SUBJECT:

On Becoming a Secretary

Do you have latent girl-Friday tendencies which are slowly being stifled? Can you see yourself as a busy executive's good right arm, handling the details which might annoy him unduly, arranging appointments with aplomb, quietly removing the distractions which might interfere with his more important worries?

It's a pretty picture indeed, especially if you can manage to look like Rosalind Russell in the process—and why not?

Most essential talents for a super-secretary, of course, are shorthand and typing. These are the groundwork upon which the "extra" attributes of the right-hand woman must be built. So, if we've never learned the stuff, or have forgotten, or never did manage to get a dictation speed better than 80, let's quick-like take steps to get the basic talents well in hand.

The YMCA at 17th and K, offers (starting September 27), shorthand to take care of almost any problem. If you're a beginner, there's a strictly speedy course, four hours per week and, they promise, you'll be ready for dictation in 15 weeks. The tariff is $25 for the works. If you once knew Gregg (or Pitman) and have forgotten what's what, you can take a review course in either system—11 weeks, twice a week—for $7.

Dictation classes at speeds from 60 words a minute up to 120 are to be had at the "Y" too, for a mere dollar. The super-speed class (up to 140 words) costs $2 for 15 weeks. Then, if you know your Spanish in no uncertain fashion, you can study Spanish shorthand. This is strictly worth knowing, too, if you want to put your language to its best possible use.

Typing classes are held twice a week, either during the day or evenings, depending upon your working hours.

The Graduate School of the Department of Agriculture offers everything imaginable in the shorthand line. Most of the theory classes are $18 for the full semester (September to January) and dictation classes are $12. If you're really good at the stuff and want to become exceptional, you can study reporting (150 to 175 words) and even advanced reporting—175 words up. Hardly seems humanly possible, does it? The Agriculture school has several courses which would serve as brusher-uppers, too.

Both American University and George Washington University have courses in shorthand and typing, if you want to be a bona fide coed while you're learning.

Special Aids

Now that we've disposed of the routine, let's see what's to be found in the special aids which will make a good stenographer into a very good secretary.

The YWCA has an intriguing course called "The Career Girl" (that's us) which goes into efficiency, leadership, self-direction, getting along with coworkers and such, in addition to the more personal subjects of budgeting, wardrobe, grooming, health and prettying up one's environment. There's also a course in "how to meet the public"—which includes recognizing the rank of officers, being rude politely and, no doubt, how to win friends and you know what.

The Department of Agriculture school teaches "Secretarial Practices" for $12 a semester. The course goes on through two semesters and takes care of just about everything a model secretary should know. Then there are such studies as practical English, Government letter-writing and other skills which are worth knowing about. You may get a catalogue or information from this school, by the way, by calling Republic 4142, Extension 5943, or going to the business office, Room 1031 South Agriculture Building.

Of course, there are excellent courses in English grammar and vocabulary building (essentials if we ever saw any) at both George Washington and American Universities.

Washington has a multitude of secretarial schools, too, which are working overtime to make skilled stenographers and secretaries out of rough diamonds such as you, Miss Brown, so you can't stick at your routine just on the premise that nothing can be done about it. The courses we've menioned are held in the evening and you literally can't afford to miss 'em. All of them, at least!

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

It's about time to make a doll from a firmly woven work sock. Machine-stitch along dotted lines. Cut off toe and between dotted lines. Turn and stuff. Tie and embroider face with yarn. Stuffed toe pieces become arms.

Engagements Are Made Known Today

Capt. and Mrs. Charles V. B. Cushman of Upperville, Va., make known the engagement of Mrs. Cushman's sister, Miss Helen Hazard Powers of Red Bank, N. J., and Washington, to Dr. Richard Earle De Butts of Washington and Upperville.

Miss Powers is the daughter of Mrs. Harry Lord Powers of Red Bank and the late Mr. Powers. Dr. De Butts is the son of Mrs. Dulany Forrest De Butts and the late Mr. De Butts of Upperville. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia Medical School and practices in Washington.

The wedding will take place in October.

Camp—McLean

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas James Camp of Fort Knox, Ky., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Julie Mattis, to Maj. John Robert McLean, USA son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. McLean of St. Paul, Minn.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the Madeira School and Smith College and is a member of the Junior League. Major McLean was graduated from the United States Military Academy and is serving in the Armored Artillery at Fort Knox.

Hardy—Hathaway

Mrs. Cleo C. Hardy of College Park announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Pauline Hardy, to Neal L. Hathaway, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gale A. Hathaway of University Park.

Both Miss Hardy and her fiance are graduates of the University of Maryland. The wedding will take place in College Park on October 8.

Chapline—Fitzgerald

Capt. Vance Duncan Chapline, USN, and Mrs. Chapline announce the engagement of his daughter, Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Chapline, to Lieut. Richmond Dean Fitzgerald, son of Dr. and Mrs. James P. Fitzgerald of Highland Park, Ill.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the National Cathedral School and attended the University of Nebraska and is a member of the Army-Navy sorority, Tau Omicron Phi.

Lieutenant Fitzgerald attended the University of Illinois and is now stationed at Quantico, Va., with the Marine Corps. The wedding will take place the end of this month.

The Boltons Fete Friends At Maryland Home

Uniforms were in the majority at the al fresco buffet supper given last evening in their Kensington, Md., home by Lieut. Luther Matthew Bolton, USNR, and Mrs. Bolton.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. William O. Spears were among the guests, as were the Brazilian Air Attache, Col. Armando de Souza e Mello Araripoia, and Senhora de Araripoia; the Argentine Naval and Air Attache, Capt. Alberto D. Brunet, and Senora de Brunet, and the Brazilian Naval Attache, Comdr. Edmundo Jordao Amorim do Valle, and Senhora do Valle.

Others in the informal gathering were Capt. Calvin Metz, Comdr. Herbert Parker, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Paul Bardy, Comdr. Howard Adams, Lieut. George Abell, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Mrs. Edward Treglown, Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Wells March and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Whitehouse.

Lieut. and Mrs. Bolton will be off this weekend for Canada. Since the trip will be made during a brief Navy leave, the Boltons will return to their Kensington home before very long.

Mary Rumsey Is Recent Bride

Now on a wedding trip to New York and Boston are Corpl. Paul L. Matthews and his bride, the former Miss Mary E. Rumsey.

Their marriage took place September 2 in St. Ann's Church, with the Rev. Russell A. Phelan officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charles G. Rumsey and the late Mr. Rumsey. Given in marriage by her brother, Charles J. Rumsey, she was attired in white satin, styled with a tight bodice and court train. Her finger-tip veil fell from a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a white prayerbook with a corsage of white orchids. Her only attendant was Miss Madeline Rumsey and Joseph Marceson served as best man.

Following their wedding trip, the bridegroom will return to Camp Bowie in Texas and the bride will make her home with her mother for the duration.

Back From Vermont

Miss Mary Echols, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Oliver P. Echols, has returned from Vermont, where she has spent the summer. She will have as her guest for a week, Miss Mary Owens of St. Joseph, Mo. Miss Owens' mother, Mrs. Stephen K. Owens, will be the guest of Mrs. Echols.

This is one picture the bride's father (a well-known photographer and photographic editor of The Washington Post) didn't take. He was busy giving his only daughter away. After going all through high school together and graduating at the same time, he, Lieut. Nicholas D. Fratt 3d, above, went on to Harvard and then joined the Army Air Forces, where he received his wings as a fighter just two weeks ago. She, Miss Dorothy Jean Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Miller, went on to graduate at Mount Vernon Junior College. Now they are Lieutenant and Mrs. Fratt, and are on their way to their new home at Avon Park, Fla., where Lieutenant Fratt is stationed

Chilean Official To Be Honored At Reception

September 18 will be a red-letter day for the Chilean Embassy.

It marks the 143d anniversary of Chilean independence and it will also be the occasion for a large reception at 10 oclock to honor the Chilean Foreign Minister, Joaquin Fernandez, who will arrive in Washington the day before. The fete will be held at the Pan American Union, a perfect setting for a party of large proportions, with its esplanade and Aztec gardens, which will be opened if the evening is mild.

Chile's Foreign Minister will reach the United States on September 16 and expects to be in Washington for about a week. He and his party will stop at Blair House.

Horse Show Brings Guests To Virgina

The comings and goings in Virginia hunt country gain added momentum during the horse show days.

Mrs. Frederick W. Haserick of Warrenton, Va., and her daughter, Mrs. Stephen Clark, are spending a week at the St. Regis Hotel in New York. They will return to Warrenton shortly. Mrs. Clark arrived last week from Fort Riley for a visit.

The Warrenton Horse Show brought Miss Bunny Scott to Middleburg to be the house guest of Mrs. J. Mackenzie Tabb. Miss Scott has many friends and relatives near Middleburg and has been the guest of honor at several informal parties there.

Mrs. Juliette Crosby Hornblow has come down from New York for a visit with her father, Oscar T. Crosby, and her sister, Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, at their home, View Tree, near Warrenton.

Virginians are still talking about the winning of the coveted ASPCA Horsemanship Event at the Warrenton Horse Show by Miss Dorothy Fred, daughter of Rogers Fred of Middleburg. Miss Eve Prime of Warrenton took second place, Miss Laura Ann Hughes of Washington won the third-place ribbon and Miss Mary Davy of Middleburg took fourth honors.

Purely Personal

Representative Sol Bloom and his daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, have returned to the Capital after spending several weeks at Swampscott, Mass.

Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris have returned to their home on R st. after a two weeks stay at Rehoboth Beach, Del.

Mr. and Mrs Frank A Waring, their daughter, Joan, and Mrs. Waring's mother, Mrs. G. Walter Monroe, left yesterday for Rehoboth Beach. They will return the first of next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lambdon entertained a number of their friends at a buffet supper on Wednesday evening at their home, Cotland Farm, near The Plains, Va. Maj. and Mrs. H. L. Taylor arrived on Tuesday from Camp Pickett, Va., to be the house guests of the Lambdons. Maj. Taylor will leave soon for foreign duty.

Mrs. Gene Chandler has arrived here for a visit with her parents Mr. and Mrs. L. Q. C. Lamar. She has come from Salina, Kans., where Lieutenant Chandler is stationed.

LIEUT. AND MRS. RICHARD H. SNOW

Lieut. Snow And Bride on Honeymoon

Upon their return from a wedding trip to Virginia Beach, Lieut. (j. g.) Richard Higgins Snow and his bride, the former Miss Nellie Lee Goff, will make their home in Arlington.

Their marriage took place last Saturday in the First Baptist Church here with the Rev. Harlan Stenger officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Goff of Rocky Mount N. C., and Lieutenant Snow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Snow of Arlington, Mass. Lieut. Kenneth Beggs gave the bride in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory satin, a fingertip-lenth veil with coronet of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of gladioli.

Miss Elizabeth Gilmore was maid of honor and Russell Snow served as best man. Ushers included Lieut. J. C. Larson, Lieut. Russell Rehm, Lieut. Glenn Nixon and Ensign Fred Ferdlund.

Following the ceremony a reception took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Haas. The bridegroom received his degree from George Washington University and is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

Mrs. F. V. Harper Returns Soon From Indiana

Mrs. Fowler V. Harper will return from a stay in Indiana shortly to find her husband has taken over new duties as solicitor of the Department of the Interior.

Mrs. Harper is in Bloomington, Ind., with her daughter, Constance, who will start her first term at the University of Indiana this fall. After graduating from the Academy of the Holy Cross this year, Constance decided to enroll in the university where her father taught on the law faculty for a number of years. He is now on leave from his faculty post.

Mr. Fowler, who was sworn in as solicitor on Monday, is the successor of Warner Gardner, who resigned to accept a commission in the Army. The new solicitor came to Washington in April of last year to act as deputy chairman of the War Manpower Commission. In May of this year, he went to the Office of Economic Warfare, where he was chief, area branch, of the Office of Imports. He is an associate member of the War Labor Board, a position he has held for some time.

Mr. Harper holds degrees from Ohio Northern University, Iowa University and Michigan University. He has a long academic history, having served on the law faculties of North Dakota, Louisiana State, Oregon and Texas Universities.

Mrs. Catherine Conner of Bardstown, Ky., is here at the Mayflower. Mrs. Conner lived here for several years when she was Democratic National Committeewoman from Kentucky.

Mrs. George Gaydash and Mrs. Ugo Carusi have gone to Beach Haven, N. J., for several weeks.

Mrs. Charles E. Noyes is spending several days in New York at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Looks as if the Hopkinses Really Are Moving Out of the White House This Time—But I'm Not Making Any Promises

FLASH! The Harry Hopkinses have signed a lease for the house at 3340 N st., Georgetown, and whether they move or not, their rent starts October 1. . . . They'll still be living in a white house. The place they've taken—which, incidentally belongs to Mrs. Harold Walker—is of white brick. It's a corner home, small and attractive, and has been entirely redecorated to Mrs. Hopkins' taste. . . . As I said before, they've signed the lease and have said they were moving in next month. . . Of course, there's no telling, some emergency may keep them house guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Times past, rumors have rippled freely that Hopkins and his attractive wife were hunting a house. Several weeks ago, I heard they had their eye on the N street place, and I printed the rumor several days before any other columnist.

"What's this I read—about your moving from the White House?" a friend asked Hopkins the day after my paragraph appeared.

"I'm going to move from the White House when I'm kicked out—not before," he replied.

Now, if he does move, we can draw our own conclusions.

Speaking of moving, as who isn't nowadays, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fell—he's the son of Mrs. Ogden Mills—will be among those calling a transfer company soon. They've been sharing a house with Col. and Mrs. Russell Forgan, who came here not long ago from Chicago, and the place was so small that when the Fells were in town, the Forgans went to Bar Harbor, and when the Forgans returned, the Fells took off to their home at Oyster Bay. . . . Mrs. Fell, incidentally, is the former Josephine Lambeer. Friends call her "Fifi." Fifi Fell. I like that. Sounds like something out of a book.

Winston Churchill's oratory—the envy of many men who sway public opinion by platform appearances — doesn't just happen to have every impressive pause falling where it will chalk up the best effect. . . . In others words, Britain's Prime Minister writes his oratory into his speeches by the simple expedient of allotting a line to every breath. Pauses then fall at the end of every line of copy, and his finished manuscript gives very much the appearance of poetry—free verse, of course—with sometimes only a phrase to the line, and with the margins having no irregularity. Neat trick.

If a few of the high-ranking officers around this town ever happen to overhear some of their public relations people talking over the telephone—well, there should be a swift change in the weather, and no mistake about it. . . .

Take a case yesterday. A reporter called the office of Col. Oveta Culp Hobby to find out if there was any "news" about her — whether she was planning any trips soon, whether she had any guests—just routine questions that might lead to a brief note about one of America's most important women. The query was the usual type reporters put to wives of Army and Navy officers several times a week, and answers about the husbands in question come through regularly and courteously—unless, of course, said husband is off on a secret mission.

Too bad all officers haven't wives to help them out. Whoever was answering the telephone in Col. Hobby's office yesterday, for example, didn't do her WAC boss a favor when she told the inquiring reporter that Colonel Hobby was an officer, an Army officer; that her comings and goings could be of no possible news value; that she was out of town at present, "But if she were here, she would tell you exactly the same thing."

I'd be willing to wager my last box of wire hairpins she wouldn't. Not in those words, and that snippy tone, anyway.

Flavor and Fragrance Of Fresh Fruit Stimulate Appetites

Money spent in purchasing a regular supply of fresh fruit is economical health insurance. Fruit is valued in the diet because of the vitamins, minerals and energy value furnished by it

Homemakers constantly on the lookout for healthful foods to serve, shouldn't have any difficulty now providing foods full of vitamins and minerals.

The fruit season is in high swing right now. Peaches, apples, pears, melons, calavos and other fruits are in the market. Of course they are not being sold at normal prices. But there are few foods today which have not risen in price.

Instead of grumbling about the prices, give thought how you can best cook and serve the foods to give the most appeal and best nutrition. Apples can be used in more ways than to make apple sauce or apple pie. Pears are grand when stewed but there are other ways to prepare them. Peaches and cream are both a delicious and a beneficial dessert, but this favorite fruit can be made into a variety of dishes.

Let's look at the possibilities of some of the fruits. How can we prepare them to give variety? The following are suggestions for using fruits. And don't overlook the fact that fruits are greatly to be desired in the diet for more than their esthetic appeal.

Suit Fruit to Use

You will find three different types of apples on the market—the typical dessert apple, ideal for eating but not so satisfactory for baking and cooking; the varieties especially good for baking, which will hold their shape even when baked until soft, are Tolman Sweet, Stayman, Rome Beauty and Arkansas or Black Twig.

Now for apple sauce and apple pie you will want an apple that will cook tender in a short time. For this purpose look to the Stayman, York Imperial, Rhode Island Greening, Northwestern Greening, Arkansas Black, Ben Davis and Stark varieties.

Some varieties of apples fit into all three groups, being good as dessert apples as well as good for general cooking. Among the versatile ones are the Stayman, McIntosh, Grimes Golden, Spitzenburg Jonathan, Northern Spy, Wealthy, Wagener and Baldwin.

Here are some suggestions for using apples in cookery:

FRENCH APPLE CAKE

Grease a deep 8-inch pie pan or oven-proof dish. Cover the bottom well with 2 cups or more sliced apples. Sprinkle the fruit with 2-3 cup sugar, cinnamon or nutmeg and the rind and juice of 1 lemon. Dredge it with 1 tablespoon flour. (1 egg well beaten may be substituted for the flour.) Dot the mixture with 2 to 4 tablespoons butter or margarine. Sift before measuring 1 cup bread flour and resift with ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add 2 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine and ¼ cup milk, which have all been beaten together. Beat these ingredients with swift strokes until they are blended. Cover the fruit with the batter. Bake the cake in a hot oven 425 degrees F. for about 30 minutes. Reverse it on a platter. Cool slightly. Cover the cake with meringue, which is made by adding 2 tablespoons water (optional) and ⅛ teaspoon salt, to 2 egg whites. Whip them until they are frothy and add ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar. Whip them until they are stiff, but not dry. Beat in ½ teaspoonful at a time, 4 tablespoons granulated or confectioner's sugar. Beat in ½ teaspoon vanilla. Bake the cake, which has been covered with the meringue, in a slow oven 300 degrees F. for 15 minutes.

APPLE-SAUCE COOKIES

Cream together ½ cup shortening and 1 cup sugar until light and fluffy. Add 1 egg and beat well. Sift together 2½ cups sifted enriched flour, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon soda and 1 teaspoon baking powder. Add the dry ingredients alternately with 1 cup thick unsweetened apple sauce to the creamed mixture. Add ½ cup raisins and ½ cup chopped nut meats. Drop from spoon on greased cookie sheet about 2 inches apart. Bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 5 dozen cookies.

Sometime when you want to prepare an evening meal in a short time, try serving apple fritters with a slice of ham or bacon strips. Here is a recipe for making the apple fritters.

APPLE FRITTERS

Pare, core and cut 2 medium sized sour apples in slices like doughnuts or cut in eighths. Make a batter by beating 2 egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add 2-3 cup milk, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Add 1 cup sifted bread flour, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. Stir only until blended. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites, stir the apples into the batter. Heat fat to 370 degrees or until hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread in 1 minute. Take up fruit batter with long-handled fork, permitting surplus batter to drain off into bowl, and then carefully lower into the fat. Fry until delicately brown, about 3 to 5 minutes. Remove with skimmer and drain on crumpled unglazed paper. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve hot with sauce. A lemon sauce is especially good with apple fritters.

When fruit fritters are to be served with chicken, omit the sugar in the batter.

The peach season ends all too soon for those who enjoy this fruit. So make flavorsome dishes of them while you can. Of course there will be canned peaches—if you can your own, or have the necessary blue points. Here is a recipe for a frozen peach concoction:

PEACH SHERBET

Boil 2 cups sugar and 1 quart water together for 5 minutes, add 1 teaspoon gelatin which has been softened in cold water. When the mixture is cold, add 2 cups peach pulp which has been sieved, the juice of 1 lemon and juice of 2 oranges. Freeze in tray of mechanical refrigerator.

ONE CRUST PEACH PIE

Line a deep pie plate with pastry. Cream ¼ cup butter or margarine with 1 cup sugar. Add 1-3 cup flour and rub to a crumb-like mixture. Sprinkle half of this mixture on the bottom of the pastry-lined pie plate. Lay on this 6 medium-sized peaches which have been pared, cut in halves and the stones removed, laying them with the cut side down. Sprinkle 4 tablespoons water and ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg over the peaches, and last the remainder of the crumb-like mixture. Bake in a hot oven of 450 degrees F. for 10 minutes and then in a moderate oven of 350 degrees F. for 20 minutes, or until the peaches are tender. Serve cold.

Seasonal Foods

Take advantage of seasonal food. Plump, fragrant apples strut to the family table in many a dress when combined with enriched flour or enriched bread. To mention only a few: Apple strudel, apple-sauce cookies, apple crumb pudding, Dutch apple cake, apple dumplings and apple-sauce muffins are all-American favorites., as is the famed apple pie.

Pickled Foods Are Delightful Accessories

Why can pickles? There are several reasons. Because they will add zest to a meal, are inexpensive to make, are easy to can, provide flavor and texture contrast, are some of the reasons.

Bread and butter pickles are among the most favored kinds. Here is a recipe for preparing them in this way:

BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES

Wash 25 to 30 medium-sized cucumbers and slice them as thin as possible. Chop 8 large onions and add 2 large chopped peppers, then combine with the sliced cucumbers, and add ½ cup salt. Let stand 3 hours and drain. Combine 2 cups cider vinegar, 5 cups sugar (2½ pounds), 2 tablespoons mustard seed and 1 teaspoon turmeric in large preserving kettle, bring to a boil. Add the drained cucumbers. Heat thoroughly but do not boil. Pack while hot into sterilized jars and seal.

Crabapples can also make grand pickles. The following is a recipe for preparing them:

SWEET CRABAPPLE PICKLE

Select 3 pounds crabapples with stems if possible. Wash carefully and steam until nearly done. Tie in a muslin bag, 1½ teaspoons whole cloves; 1½ teaspoons ginger and 1½ teaspoons cinnamon bark. Place spice bag in preserving kettle with 3 pounds sugar and 2 cups cider vinegar and boil for 5 minutes. Then drop the apples in and simmer for about 20 minutes. Pack in sterilized jars and fill with sirup. If sirup seems thin then boil for a few minutes after the apples have been removed and then fill the jars.

Good Food

Molasses and enriched flour make good food. Molasses, as rich in food iron as in color, is an appetizing companion for precious B vitamins in enriched flour. Flavorful molasses cookies and fluffy gingerbread are two pleasing results from the uniting of these featured foods, molasses and enriched flour.

Flour a Stretcher Food

Stretching scarcer foods with enriched flour avoids waste during wartime economy. Combining enriched flour with other food essentials saves needed pennies for war stamps. Additional war stamps purchased help Uncle Sam build the Shangri La.

Sweetbreads in Salad

Sweetbreads don't always have to be served creamed . . . though that's a favorite way. Try them in a salad for a taste treat. Cook the sweetbreads, then chop cold with ripe olives and sliced, hard-cooked eggs.

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

Serve Pork Chops This Brand New Way
If your husband likes pork chops—and what man doesn't—he'll really go for this brand new way to serve his favorite meat. It's Star Pork Chops with Apple Dressing! A new flavor blend that's so tasty . . . he'll insist you make it a regular stand-by!
Served in a casserole, the apple dressing topped with thick, juicy chops makes a wonderful looking meal. And it tastes even better than it looks! When you buy your meat, we suggest that you ask for Armour's Star Pork Chops. They're thick slices of delicious and tender pork . . . just cram full of essential food values.
Brown 4 rib or shoulder pork chops slowly on one side. Remove. Add ½ cup water to the drippings in the pan. Add this to 1 quart diced apples, 1½ cups dry bread crumbs, 2 tsps. salt, ¼ cup minced onion and mix well. Add 1 tbsp. sugar for sour apples. Place mixture in a flat casserole and cover with the chops . . . putting the browned side downward. Bake 1 hour in a 350° F. oven. Remove cover from casserole the last 20 min. of baking period so that the upper side of the chops will brown. Serves 4.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Come Monday, members of the Washington alumnae of National Park College will trek back to their old alma mater in Glendale, Md. Occasion is a presentation ceremony of a library to the United States Army. Gen. Shelley U. Marietta, Commandant of Walter Reed Hospital, will receive the books. Time is 2 p. m.

The former National Park College is now known as Ward 50 of Walter Reed Hospital. It is being used for convalescent soldiers. Now the soldiers will get the school's former library known as the Charlotte Priest Memorial Library. A portion of the library was donated by the alumnae of the school, hence the attendance en masse. Members of the alumnae committee include Mrs. George R. Evans, chairman; Miss Frances F. Beck, secretary, and Mrs. Arthur C. Perry, publicity.

United Nations Fete

Visiting celebrities, tennis matches, a swimming exhibition, plus dancing and a Latin-American supper are in the offing for members of the United Nations Club who gather at Dumbarton Oaks Sunday afternoon and evening. Lieut. Ted Gibson, Navy aviator who dropped the first bomb on Guadalcanal, will be a guest of the club. Lieut. E. P. Park, another aviator, will give a swimming exhibition.

A former Wimbledon player, Mary Cootes (Mrs. Peter Berlin) and Elizabeth de Noailles (wife of Lieut. Gen. G. N. Macready), a former French tennis player, will vie in a singles match during the afternoon.

Other entertainment scheduled is a group of songs by Maurine Holmes, vocalist, and a skit by the "Topsy and Eva Team"—the Duncan sisters. Dancing on the terrace follows the supper. Miss Meredith Howard, director of the club, who has been out of town much of the summer, will attend.

Zonta's Box Supper

It's going to be a good old-fashioned box supper. The ways and means committee, Zonta Club of Washington, is flinging the event tomorrow afternoon, 4:30 o'clock, at the home of Emma T. Hahn, 6036 Oregon ave. Proceeds of the benefit supper will go to United China Relief.

Each club member is requested to bring a box for herself and each of her guests. Mabel Strider, auctioneer, will sell to the highest bidder.

Members of the ways and means committee planning the party are Mrs. Louise R. Stambaugh, chairman; Miss Emma T. Hahn, vice chairman; Marguerite Morris, Vera Lundquist, Edythe Barker and Adelaide Flanagan.

Bits of This and That

Senor Cromeyer-Chavez lectures on Latin-American poetry at the Latin American Institute, at noon today. Old and new members of the school will drop in for open house tea Sunday afternoon, 4 to 6 o'clock . . . Intermediate group of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society will meet Monday at the Jewish Community Center . . . Fall activities of the Woman's Club of Kensington will get under way at a luncheon meeting next Thursday September 16, 12:30 to 2 p. m., at the Reinhardt School for Deaf Children. Purpose of the luncheon is to raise funds to defray the expense of the Christmas project for Kensington men in the armed forces. Last year each man received an especially designed greeting card and package . . . Miss Irene Richards, director of the health education department of the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., announces the beginning of Red Cross life-saving courses Monday. Classes will meet 3 to 5 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Pi Beta Phi Tea

The Washington Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi Fraternity is honoring young women who are entering college this fall at a tea tomorrow afternoon, 5 to 7 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Dale Drain, 3110 Garfield st.

A display of articles from the fraternity's project the settlement school at Gatlinburg, Tenn., will be on exhibit, the articles including handwoven bedspreads, tablecloths, linens, wood carving and baskets. Pi Beta Phi has made its war project this year the granting of 10 scholarships of $400 each to qualified college women for the study of physiotherapy.

Mrs. Gaddis Dutton is chairman of arrangements for the tea, and the members of her committee include Miss J. Irene Daniel, Mrs. Dale Drain, Mrs. Wilbur J. Eccleston, Mrs. Robert F. Dyer and Mrs. Winfield Weitzel. Those assisting Mrs. Drain are Miss Maxine Girts, president of the Washington Alumnae Club; Mrs. Adam Wenchel, president of the Junior Alumnae Club; Mrs. Edgar Poe Allen, Mrs. Reginald Pledger, Mrs. James Greear, Mrs. Guy Crampton, Mrs. B. H. Lingo, Mrs. Frank Nesbitt, Mrs. Clinton Mission, Mrs. Arthur E. Nesbit, Mrs. A. M. Granum, Mrs. David McPherson, Mrs. A. Lee Thompson, Mrs. Fred M. Babcock Miss Patricia Orr, president of the D. C. Alpha Chapter of Pi Beta Phi at George Washington University, and Miss Marjorie Gessford, rush chairman.

Renew Upholstery

Upholstery needs brushing each week and a sharp-eyed hunt for pests. Remove cushions and clean the crevices. Clean off stains. If the pile is mashed, you can steam it, this way: Spread a damp cotton cloth on the crushed pile and hold an iron—hot enough to make steam—close to the cloth, but not touching.

OFFICIAL NOTICES 5

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL BOARD, Washington, D. C., September 10, 1943. Notice is hereby given that the following persons have applied for licenses under the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, and that protests will be received on or before September 24, 1943, at 9:15 a. m., in room No. 225, District Building, after which date a time will be set for a public hearing of such protests: 5131, Otto Murai Matirko, retailer's "C," 935 Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W.; 5191, Thomas Dennis Maloney, retailer's "B," 1300 D Street S. E. THOMAS ELLIS LODGE, AGNES K. MASON, WILLIAM P. MEREDITH, ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL BOARD.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, District of Columbia:—Whereas, on the 30th day of August, 1943, the United States filed a libel in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, in District Court Case No. 2879 against 10 cartons, more or less, of candy labeled in part (ctns) " * * * * Cocoanut Bonbons * * * * " and whereas by virtue of process in due form of law, to me directed, I have seized and taken into my possession, to wit: 6 cartons and 10 lbs. of candy labeled in part " * * * * Cocoanut Bonbons * * * ," I hereby give notice to all persons claiming the said described above, or knowing or having anything to say why the same should not be condemned and forfeited, that they appear and assert said claim in the cause on or before the date returnable, SEPTEMBER 15TH, 1943, in the U. S. District Court, City of Washington, D. C., at 10:00 a. m. JOHN B. COLPOYS, U. S. Marshall.

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, WASHINGTON, September 7, 1943. ORDERED: That the Vehicle Title and Registration Regulations of the District of Columbia, be, and the same are hereby, amended as follows: Strike out the Chapter entitled "Emergency Identification Tags" and insert in lieu thereof, the following: "Section 41. Emergency Identification Tags. Identification tags for the registration year beginning April 1, 1942 and ending March 31, 1943 shall be valid for the registration year beginning April 1, 1944 and ending March 31, 1945 to the same extent as if issued for such year, if the identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1945 are securely attached to the face of the tags for the year ending March 31, 1943, so as to cover the numerals (43) that appear on such tags. Identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1945 shall be in the form of a metal strip of size and color to be determined by the Director. All applications for registration and owner's identification tags or for dealer's identification tags for the registration year ending March 31, 1945 shall be accompanied by a remittance for the fees and taxes required by law and the vehicle title and registration regulations. If applicant is the possessor of owner's identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1944, for the vehicle described upon such application or dealer's identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1944, such application shall also be accompanied by the registration card for such tags. If the applicant is not the possessor of owner's identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1944 such application shall contain a statement to this effect. All such applications shall be delivered to the Director by the applicant or his agent. If the Director determines that the applicant is entitled to registration, he shall issue a registration card, and to an applicant whose application was accompanied by a registration card expiring March 31, 1944, he shall issue identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1945 and to an applicant whose application was not accompanied by registration card expiring March 31, 1944, he shall issue identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1943 and identification tags for the year ending March 31, 1945 and shall place upon the registration tags he issues for use with such card and the number of identification tags that appeared on the registration card, if any, that accompanied the application. While the registration card for the registration year expiring March 31, 1944 is in transit to or in the possession of the Director or in transit to the registrant, a vehicle displaying the identification tags whose number appears on such registration card, may be operated or moved upon a public highway without such registration card being with it, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (c) of section 32 and paragraph (f) of section 38." J. R. YOUNG, G. MASON, C. W. KUTZ, Commissioners, D. C.

Food Contest Admits Fruits, Vegetables

Fruits as well as vegetables may be entered in the canned goods exhibit in competition for prizes at the Victory Garden contest evening being held September 16 at the Gas Light Company auditorium, 11th and H sts. nw.

Prizes will be awarded for fresh vegetables, as well as the best exhibit of 10 cans of fruits or vegetables, 2 each, entered in the exhibit, between 1 and 5 p. m. the day of the contest. No previous registration is necessary. Awards will be made at 8 p. m.

At the same time awards for the best victory gardens in the local area will be presented. Judges made their decisions yesterday, but winners will not be announced until next Wednesday.

The grand award team, Dr. Victor R. Boswell, senior horticulturist of the Beltsville Research Station, chairman; Mrs. Chase Donaldson of Bethesda, and Robert Roland, secretary of the Society of American Florists, who was in Washington from Chicago to open a local office, judged 50 finalists previously selected by area judges.

The grand prize will be a $100 war bond. Twenty-five dollar bond prizes will be awarded for the best gardens in the four sections of Washington and the four neighboring counties, and $10 war stamp second prizes also will be awarded in these eight areas. War stamp prizes of $10 and $5 will be awarded for the best gardens in defense areas.

Canned goods prizes will be $25, $10 and $5 in bonds and stamps. For the best of each of 20 varieties of vegetables $5 prizes will be awarded, with a $10 sweepstakes prize.

Dr. Boswell will be chief judge of fresh vegetables, and Ethel M. Regan, Government home demonstration agent, chief judge of canned goods.

Miss Coolidge Retired From Central High

Helen M. Coolidge, who became assistant principal of Central High School when it moved to the present building 27 years ago, has been retired for disability as of August 31, public school officials announced yesterday.

Her retirement after an illness following a stroke last spring brought expressions of regret from coworkers and former students.

"It will be hard to think of Central without her," Lawrence G. Hoover, the fifth principal whom she has served as assistant said last night.

"She was outstanding in every way," he said, "cultured and bright, generous and tactful. . . . She worked far beyond the necessity of her job, and it probably was devotion to duty that caused her premature retirement.

"She was the very heart of the school," he concluded.

Native born, and educated in District schools, Miss Coolidge was herself a graduate of Central. She entered the schools to teach elementary art in 1902, became a Central High art teacher at the old 7th and O sts. building in 1906, and was chosen assistant principal by Emory Wilson, Central's principal, when the new building was opened. She attended Washington Normal School, George Washington University and New York University, and received her M. A. from Catholic University.

Spotlight Whisky Sale Trial Opens

Three men and a woman who are charged with the sale of whisky without license last November at "The Spotlight," an after-hours club which was located at 476 K st. nw., went on trial yesterday in Municipal Court before Judge Walter J. Casey.

Defendants are Miss Mildred Sonken, 38, and Vincent Grillo, 39, both of 2905 Otis st. ne.; Louis M. Albaugh, 42, of Baltimore, and Edward Everson, 37, of 2703 Bladensburg rd. ne.

Policeman Edwin Talbot testified he purchased three bottles of whisky by first asking Albaugh where it could be purchased; he said Albaugh directed him to a doorman who gave him a telephone number, and by phone Talbot obtained it from a "street bootlegger."

It was testified that Talbot and Detective Sergt. Nunzio Bonaccorsey, in their investigation spent several evenings at the club in the company of women. They testified that some whisky was consumed by the party and that $147 of $150 in police funds were spent in the investigation.

The case was originally scheduled for trial late in November, but because of arguments over technicalities and difficulty in obtaining witnesses trial was delayed. Meanwhile, three other defendants entered the Army and a fourth skipped bond.

The defense claims that the club was a licensed "restaurant-club" which catered to "good fellowship and musicions," and sold merely setups and ice. It is claimed that entrance to the club was by admittance card only, obtained by members for $5.
